AFFAIRS OF NICARAGUA.

Failure of a Secondary Expedient of the Filibuster Movement.

Effect of the Dallas-Clarendon Treaty—Rivalry of the Filibuster Chiefs, &c.

To the Editors of The New-York Daily Times:

Some, those precluded by their position against the issue of my former letters on this subject, History of Wm. WALKER, were notwithstanding my assurance in view of their actual situation, for predicting which so improbable the writer was ridiculed at the time with every outlash and imputation not too great to be inserted in your columns. I cannot expect such to appreciate the charitable motives of my future silence; I regret some generosity in the Dallas party to recognize their moderation as a virtue; and I have only referred to the matter at present to show you that stirring up motives of the gravest interest could hardly lead to retorter a discussion so distasteful in its incidents, and of which, when time had proved me the better prophet, I took not the least advantage.

No sooner had my first letter on the secret history of the Filibuster movement, been published, than a cloud of correspondents arose—all eager, excited, vindictive, sarcastic, and insulting, but not one arriving at the dignity of a logical or argumentative opponent. Some few of these were gentlemen misguided, but honest, who found themselves enlisted under a desperate flag, and clung to it—from a sense of consistency, or, perhaps, shame, on account of his very desperation. Others of a lower sort brandished paper bowie-knives and revolvers in a style that was the admiration of the corner groceries; they challenged the writer to impossible duels, and seemed to cherish the delusion that the exhibition of cheap valor would be accepted as a full and satisfactory reply to the unanswerable facts and documents put forward in my letters. There were yet others of the quasi-official class, who, after a lame defence, which they found untenable, next endeavored to conceal their irrepressible and guilty alarm behind an affectation of official dignity and contempt. It was beneath them, they found out, to argue with a shadow; but this discovery was not made until after the shadow had proved that he knew more than they dared mention to Genoa. Any who remember that correspondence will readily individualize the actors in it for whom these observations are intended.

But with them we have done; and with WALKER we have done; for, wholly irrespective of the Dallas-Clarendon treaty to be hereafter noticed, WILLIAM WALKER, as a power in Nicaragua, has long since ceased to exist. The pugnet of GEORGE LAW has released the pennant of CHARLES HENNINGSEN; and while the wretched original instrument of all the havoc there is retained as titular President—for the sake of such questionable popularity as may still attach to his name, and because he serves as the cloak under which our New-York capitalists have been fighting,—he is thus rendered and made a witness of the ruin provoked by the avarice of his employers and his own wild and bad ambition, the last moves of the desperate game have passed into other hands, and HENNINGSEN, GEORGE LAW's commander-in-chief, is paramount in a camp where there are only soldiers to obey.

Startling as the assertion that WM. WALKER is virtually deposed may seem to the uninitiated, let them reflect a moment and they will be satisfied, not only of its absolute truth, but that it could not possibly be otherwise. The office of President is a civil one, and there are none in Nicaragua who even pretend to obey the Filibuster Government except the soldiers in the camp and the dying in the hospitals. Over these latter, therefore, the Morgan-President may exercise his civil power; but the moment they emerge into active life again, (supposing, argument gratia, such a case to be possible,) that moment the George-Law-Commander can claim them as his own. HENNINGSEN, and a few others of the Law men, have everything as they will. WILLIAM WALKER's name is considered essential to their last faint chance of extrication; and he himself is only not a prisoner in their camp, because his infatuation, now verging towards lethargy, has never hitherto allowed him to make any public expression of his desire to escape. Doubtless if he were to do so, he would be given the same answer or sentence of death he has so often returned to others. The Commander-in-Chief cannot issue any passports. Let it, therefore, be understood by all aspiring recruits that though now, as Herodotus, invited out to die for MORGAN's Walker, they will find on their arrival at the nearest point they can obtain that it is really GEORGE LAW's Henningsen, in a camp on the other side of the lake, who requires their lives for his proprietor (who really had no call for these old minutes) that trifling favor!

Having incidentally touched upon this matter—the impossibility of effecting a junction with LAW's Henningsen—let me briefly notice the reported successes of the reinforcements under LOCKRIDGE, and, accepting these reports as true, point out what yet remains before them. We all know, by sad experience in this business, that the "glorious victories" of one steamer turn out the wretched disasters of the next; but allowing our natural suspicions, let us swallow the accounts transmitted by the filibuster agents, and see what they amount to.

TYLER, ANDERSON and Gen. WHEAT, with a force of four hundred men at the outside (still using their own accounts) had forced Hipp's Point, captured Fort Castillo, and taken possession of the burnt remains of our river steamer, the J. N. Scott, plying on the San Juan below Castillo rapids. This report is outwardly modest, and, even if true in its literal sense, conveys a wholly false impression. The fort Castillo taken was a small two-gun battery, erected on a level with the river, across the road leading to the presidio, upon which the fortress of Castillo stands; this fort was a mere earthen breastwork, and its defenders no doubt fell back into the strong castle on the height, which overlooks the reach of the river and commands it both above and below the rapids. This point was garrisoned by five hundred Costa Ricans; and a tenth of that number, with common resolution, could hold the castle against the whole muster-roll of fillibusters, until hunger compelled them to submit. The ascending party could not storm it from its strength; they had no gold, so there is no hope of treachery; they could not starve it out, for the garrison were well provisioned, and the rate of mortality amongst the fillibusters—excluding the chances of war—is twenty-five per cent. per month. Continue prudence and the fate of those they are endeavoring to reinforce, should teach them not to leave a garrison in their rear and hasten the line of supply, lest they, too, should be caught in the same trap with their friends. But prudence is not to be expected here, and we will suppose them to pass on. Unless through the very grossest neglect of the generally vigilant Costa Ricans, they could find no steamer to ascend from above the rapids to the lake. The steamer John Ogden was in sight, (so said the fillibuster correspondent,) but she, too, no doubt, had been made a fire-ship, like the Texas, Morgan, Machuca and J. N. Scott, all encased with tar and resin and ready to be burned to the water's edge whenever a signal from the castle should announce that the two-gun battery had been captured.

But great—despite the cheapness of lucifers—that this steamer above the rapids was quietly resigned to them. If the Costa Ricans had fulfilled their intention of raising obstructions across the rapids of Machuca, further up, and placing a gun battery at Toro—a point of great natural strength a few miles on this side of the entrance of the lake—the ascending party would meet with still further loss and delay, and those acquainted with the climate can imagine what the mortality would be with raw recruits, undergoing all this fatigue and excitement during their first passage through the land of pestilence. But grant that these obstacles are either surmounted or never have erected; they are now at the entrance of the lake and under the guns of Fort San Carlos—a fortress in excellent order, garrisoned by 800 men, one-third with Minie rifles in pits along the side of the river, and the whole under the command of competent French and German engineers and officers.

It cannot be denied that we are generous; for we have given them a steamer to ascend, and unmolested passage through the obstructions of Machuca and Toro. Yet we suppose in addition to this that the steamer escapes the shot of Fort San Carlos, and eve[illegible] that the fort is captured! Now then will they find themselves? And how do they propose to cross the lake to Virgin Bay, where President MOSA, with 1,100 men under General CANAS—a veteran warrior, who has already twice beaten General WALKER and HENNINGSEN at St. George and Obraje—is waiting to give them a warm reception?

Generous as we may feel inclined to be, we cannot give them either of the two steamers on the lake—for these are carrying troops and provisions between Chontales and Granada. And yet without one or other, or both of these all our former generosity is of no avail. The river steamer, John Ogden, is a mere flat-bottomed scow, top-heavy, and drawing only 18 inches of water; in her, even fillibuster desperation could scarcely attempt to cross the squally and tumultuous lake. But suppose—for we are weary of granting these indispensables by placement—suppose they do make the attempt and are successful in it, and that President MOSA either resigns his fortifications at Virgin Bay, or politely assists the fillibusters to land their baggage, arms, ammunition and artillery (the whole being drawn in a donkey cart with two little boys on mules to carry bundles;)—suppose all this, and that they have only lost one hundred men on the way by battle, desertion and malaria,—and suppose that the remaining 500 effect a junction with the 300 Law men under HENNINGSEN, we would then have at Rivas a force of less than 800 fillibusters, cut off from all supplies, in a country where the average mortality is 25 per cent. a month, and surrounded by enemies at least three times as numerous—those enemies well provisioned and natives of the climate, flushed with success at Massaya, Granada, St. George and Obraje, and constantly receiving uninterrupted reinforcements from the countries engaged in the Central American league.

This 800, then, so situated, are what is left of the 1,000 men carried to Nicaragua in the different steamers from here and New-Orleans, and swallowed up in that still hungry maelstrom! Five thousand four hundred emigrants from the States have perished there—the happier, in the hot blood of battle; the remainder of disease or their wounds in hospitals where the worm antedates his banquet on mortality and writhes and quivers and lifts up his eyeless head from the still palpitating flesh! Five thousand four hundred men have perished—and to what end? asks shuddering humanity. Did they go there with an aim—an object, obtainable and avowed, and worthy of the sacrifice proposed? Or were they mere incendiaries and pirates, lured on by an indefinite hope of pillage and free quarters, while assisting "the gray-eyed man" (as Padre VIJIL had it,) to establish a military autocracy, hostile to these United States, hostile to the democratic freedom of the population, and in league with England or France, or any other power that could be induced—through motives of hostility to the United States—to assist WM. WALKER in establishing and making permanent his assumed dictatorship? Had WALKER any desire to assist the Democratic Party of the country by whom he had been imported? No—for on the first chance he deserted them and made a league with the Chiomortistas, through CORRAL, in the hope that they would aid his views of personal aggrandisement. Did he desire to Americanize the country, so that Americans could remove and settle there as readily as they now move out to Michigan or Texas? Most indubitably not, as his bitter expressions of hate against Americans in his private letters to his English Ambassador, Gen. GORCOURIA, abundantly revealed. Self-asserting Americans, accustomed to democratic freedom, were the last men in the world that would be likely to submit to such an irresponsible dictatorship as in those letters he avowed his intention of establishing. Most indubitably not again, because had he wished our people to colonize the country, he must have known that confiscations, robberies, lust, perjury and murder, were neither the means of conciliating the native population, nor the atmosphere of society into which respectable American settlers, with wives and families, would voluntarily plunge. And once again most indubitably not,—for if he had hoped to create a legitimate army for a legitimate purpose, he would not have tolerated the drunkenness, even in his personal staff, to which his worst disasters may be attributed, nor would he have tossed captaincies into the stews of Mercer-street, to be thence groped out by whomsoever could induce two of the fair and frail ones to accompany his fortunes.

WALKER's object then was not to Americanize the country, and yet five thousand four hundred Americans have perished there for whatever was. Would you know the cause of this? The means by which this hideous waste of human life, and hope and national energy was rendered possible? Then turn your eyes from WALKER, and fix them nearer home; look into three of our down-town counting houses and you will see three men placing the mere chance of profit in one scale, and the lives or five thousand four hundred human beings—their equals and perhaps superiors—in the other,—and with the flip of a pen, the chance goes down (it is the heaviest in their eyes) and the blood ascends in the other scale to cry to heaven for vengeance. Yes, gentlemen capitalists, your millions have long arms: they have reached to Nicaragua and moved their several puppets on the smoking board. You have made the personal ambition and fatuity of WALKER subservient to your hopes of gain. You have nourished that fatal passion in him—your steamers carried free the thousands for his holocaust—you took possession of the telegraphs for lying victories—you corrupted the fountains through which our press draws information—you have desolated a generous country, rolled back the tide of American progress there for a dozen years, and nearly embroiled us in a great foreign war. But as sure as a just God lives, when the secret history of this stock-jobbing in American blood becomes known—as known it shall be—the friends and relatives of the victims butchered in your quarrel will hold you to a strict account. It will not avail you anything that you have now withdrawn from the hopeless struggle, and refused to carry fresh victims to the scene of carnage; the blood of those already slain is on your robes—it rises and half conceals the clay feet of the golden idol you worship, and every gulse of your huckstered scrip is dripping with the crimson witness.

You may endeavor to withdraw now and hide your tracks—but you repent too late. You only withdrew because the ratification of the Dallas-Clarendon Treaty, which you endeavored to defeat, removed all cause of contention between our own and the British Governments, and guarantees that the great transit route between the opposing oceans shall no longer be the battle-field between three truculent and rival monopolists. That treaty gives the disputed Bay Islands to Honduras; and the contracting Governments agree to protect Central America from all further violence, and to keep open the line of travel for the advantage of American and English interests. The rights of transit have been already transferred by the Central American Governments to parties in this City and country, whose names, when published, will suffice to restore public confidence, and assure Americans that all possible advantages will be afforded them while guaranteeing the peace of the country through which the travel has to pass. The ships that have lain idle so long will again have an opportunity of becoming useful; and when the security of the road is beyond until the whole trade of the East Indies will gradually be attracted to its Pacific terminus.

To what end, then, should this fillibuster havoc, originating among the stock-dealers of Wall-street, be protracted, since it is clear that, in the end, the joint Governments will step in and close it? LOCKRIDGE's reported success cannot affect the main result; nor would his junction with LAW's Henningsen, and any number of victories to their united forces, in the least degree alter the predetermined issue. The ratification of the Dallas-Clarendon Treaty gave the coup de grace to mangled and expiring fillibusterism; and, while we lament the fate of many prized and noble-hearted men, who have perished in the fruitless struggle, we congratulate the country on the prospect now about being opened, by a wave of the wand of peace.

The natives of Nicaragua may be inferior to the citizens of the United States in energy, intelligence, and resolution; but they are nevertheless human beings, and WILLIAM WALKER made a grave mistake when he treated them as animals of a lower type. It is an error to suppose that they are not capable of self-defence; for the fight is not always to the strongest—they have a powerful ally in the climate, and their persistancy in revolt makes up for their want of nerve when under fire. No people having once tasted democratic freedom can be wholly conquered until annihilated; and if they cannot stand the charge of American bayonets, neither can the Americans resist the influence of the "plague, pestilence, and famine," which have fought on the side of Nicaragua through the whole of this steamboat war.

THE VOICE OF NICARAGUA.

AN IMPORTANT FORECAST.

P. S.—It must be remembered that, once having effected a junction with HENNINGSEN, LOCKRIDGE would be as helpless as the man he goes to help. Twice his whole force would not suffice to garrison and keep open the river; and the Costa Ricans, returning to their deserted entrenchments, would have only as many more victims in the trap. The river is like two plates of spring-steel, meeting at an acute angle and opening vertically; you may force your way up—but unless you leave a sufficient force to hold it open, it will close behind you and cut off retreat.

Important from Nicaragua by the George Law.

Costa Rican Version of the Operations on the San Juan—Lockridge's success denied—Two hundred Recruits for Walker from San Francisco—Rumors of a great battle fought—Failure of Costa Rica to obtain a loan in Paris, &c.

Private letters received in this City yesterday, give the Costa Rican version of late operations on the San Juan River.

The Costa Ricans aver that the accounts of the successes achieved by Col. LOCKRIDGE are without foundation; that particularly at Hipps' Point, the Costa Ricans retired in perfect order, losing no arms and actually suffering no defeat.

It is also stated—but the assertion requires to be proved by the result—that the Costa Ricans had purposely allowed Col. LOCKRIDGE to ascend the river San Juan as far as Castillo;—that in fact they had enticed him up with a view to cut off his retreat and his communication with the Atlantic; and then give him battle. We may look for a confirmation or a refutation of these reports by the Tennessee, expected to arrive within a week.

The Costa Rican authorities deny altogether the report that Castillo had been taken by LOCKRIDGE, or that the latter had captured four hundred rifles.

The Costa Ricans are confident that without reinforcements they are sufficiently strong to defend San Carlos, at the source of the San Juan, against any force that can be brought against it.

From a conversation with some of the passengers of the George Law, we learn that the Sierra Nevada left San Francisco a few hours in advance of the J. L. Stephens, bound to San Juan del Sud.

At the time of her departure, it was believed in San Francisco that the Transit route was open, or would be open by the time she reached San Juan.

Besides a number of through passengers, the J. L. Stephens is reported to have carried out not less than 200 men for General WALKER, recruited in California by Captain BAKER and others. If, as is most likely, Lake Nicaragua and the river San Juan are found to be in possession of the allies, the Nevada will at once proceed to Panama.

One of our informants states that the Stephens, when off Cape Saint Lucas, met the Golden Gate, bound to San Francisco, and held communication with her. There was a rumor on board the Golden Gate, that the forces of General WALKER had been totally routed by the allies, and himself captured and hung. This rumor was most probably obtained from Acapulco, a similar one having been brought to New-York from the same place, by a late arrival.

Three or four deserters from Col. LOCKRIDGE's party, came on from Aspinwall by the George Law, working their passage.

We subjoin the letter of our Panama correspondent in relation to the position of affairs in Nicaragua:

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PANAMA, Friday, March 6, 1857.

The British steamer Trent arrived at Colon on the 21st ultimo, with dates of the day previous from Greytown. WALKER's force, no doubt, has got possession of Serapiqui, and it is said of Castillo, and even of San Carlos, thus opening the whole route. The truth appears to be, however, that an attack had been made upon the defences at Castillo, but at the last dates it had not been completely successful. There is not much doubt, however, that LOCKRIDGE is in possession of Castillo ere this. San Carlos, I expect will not be easily taken. When I was at Rivas, a month since, Col. WALKER told me that with 40 Americans he could hold it against a thousand men. It is astonishing that the Costa Ricans should be so easily driven from the possession of the river, acquired by so much labor and at such vast expense—but the fact is, they are mere poltroons in war, and scarcely deserve to succeed against their brave but unprincipled enemy.

The Panama Star and Herald says:

"We are assured by Col. KINNEY, who arrived by the last British steamer from Nicaragua, that the report of Walker's party having taken Castillo, which we published on Tuesday last, is incorrect. The Colonel says positively that such is not the case, and that the allies still remain in possession of that point."

We also read in the same paper:

"Sr. ESCALANTE, who went to Lima some time ago as Minister from Costa Rica, in order to effect a loan from the President of Peru, to enable Costa Rica to carry on the war against WALKER, has returned in high dudgeon, having, on account of the revolution in Peru, been unable to effect the object of his mission.

It appears Sr. ESCALANTE published an article abusing CASTILLA for not acceding to the request of Costa Rica, and in return the Comercio, of Lima, contains several articles anything but complimentary to the Costa Rican Minister."

WALKER'S POSITION—STRENGTH OF THE COSTA RICANS AT SAN CARLOS AND ON THE SAN JUAN—EXECUTION OF A NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENT, ETC.

The following letter from the Special Correspondent of the San Francisco Bulletin, though anterior in date to advices received in New-York, contains intelligence not yet published:

SAN JUAN, Sunday, Jan. 25, 1857.

After closing my short letter at Panama, on the 21st inst., I concluded to take a trip up on the Sierra Nevada, and look into WALKER's camp at Rivas, in order to judge for myself of the state of affairs. I shall go up this afternoon, and will write you by the Orizaba.

Col. WALKER is down at San Juan this morning, and gives me a favorable account of WALKER's forces. By the Colonel's account, WALKER has about 800 effective men, well provisioned, well armed and well clothed, and all in excellent spirits. They have not a particle of doubt as to their ability to maintain themselves against any force that may be brought against them. "The more they bring, the more we shall kill," is the common expression of all I have seen. They express great regret that the 600 men at Greytown are not able to join them. If, say they, we had them to garrison Rivas, we would, with our 800 men, clear the country, in three weeks, of every enemy we have in it.

To-day, two or three small boats will be sent over the road to the lake. The steamers Virgin and San Carlos lay under the Island of Ometepec, about twelve miles from La Virgin; and, it is believed, a boat expedition may be got up to surprise and take them in the night. Without one of these boats it would seem impossible for a junction to be formed between the forces at Greytown and Rivas. Soon, it is true, is fixing up an old river boat, by putting a saw-mill engine into her, but if she could, by any possibility, pass the Castillo and Hipp's Point and the strong position of San Carlos, she could not live in the lake at this season of the year. The Costa Ricans have no doubt strongly fortified Castillo Rapids; and San Carlos—naturally an easily defended position—had, when taken by them, a good twenty-four-pounder and a six-pound gun. With the six guns said to have been taken on one of the river boats, any one of the positions named might be, and probably has been, made so formidable that nothing that could be placed on the river could pass them. The general impression, indeed, of all of WALKER's officers with whom I have conversed, is, that the men cannot get up the river.

The Sierra Nevada brought the first news to WALKER, that the enemy had possession of the river, although the Costa Ricans had captured steamers upon it. The night before we arrived, however, on the 22d January, the Virgin came into La Virgin, with five two shots into the boiler by way, I suppose, of a notification to him of the fact. The steamer, Sarah, about the latter company, stating that her engagement did not arrive, sent over one of her boats to the Lake, on an ox team, to coast along the shore, in order to see what was the matter. The boat was manned by eight or ten of WALKER's men. Up to this date nothing has been heard from her, and it is supposed she has fallen into the hands of the enemy. WALKER has a schooner on the Lake of about 40 tons, but without a rudder or rudder-irons, and it is impossible to get her where they can be put on, so he has only his small boats to depend upon.

The St. Marys will probably be in here in about three days, having left Panama on the 21st inst., at 5 o'clock P. M. It was understood at Panama that she had orders to prevent the landing of any forces on this side for WALKER.

Mr. ROBERTS, WALKER's Secretary of the Hacienda, who, I wrote you, left Panama on the 11th in a fishing boat, has not yet arrived.

TOKER, the correspondent of the New-Orleans Delta, who deserted HENNINGSEN at Granada, is said to have been hung by the Legitimists. Also, Col. SILVA, who deserted WALKER, shared the same fate. Rumor, it appears, was been prisoner about six months, during that time, Silva, as "the Spanish Scotch Rover, who, having lost an ear," Gen. CANAS took him to his own house at San Jose, fed, him at his own table, and treated him with so much respect that not a cover was allowed to be removed at his table, without the presence of his prisoner, or rather his guest. He voluntarily gave CANAS information in respect to WALKER's forces, and after he was fully recovered was released. When he returned to WALKER, he published an account of his adventures in Costa Rica, in which he abused his benefactor, and stated that he had completely deceived him in his account of WALKER. For this conduct he was undoubtedly hung.

Gen. FOY and lady, and several of WALKER's men and officers, go to San Francisco to-morrow.

The ship Narragansett, from New-York, with coal, to GARRISON & MORGAN, is still in port, her men in irons, refusing to do duty.

[After writing the foregoing, our correspondent was arrested by order of WALKER and carried to Rivas. We await further strange developments.—Ed. Bulletin.]

The Bulletin also publishes the following letter, translated from the Swedish. It was written to a friend in San Francisco by a soldier in WALKER's army:

ST. GEORGE, Dec. 12, 1856.

This letter I suppose will announce my death to you. I say so without regret, hoping in another world to find that rest which I have long wanted to find in these my last days. I have taken the worst path to seek fortune, for I find that fortune will necessarily ever shun the place where WALKER and his monster Generals are. If I could write as DANTE or VICTOR HUGO, the most horrible truths that ever pen told would be proclaimed to the world. For all the wildest fantasies of hunger, sickness, misery and crime, that could be detailed by those here, is little to what is the hard reality.

I have now been literally starving here for the last fourteen days. I have been at the battle of Granada, which WALKER will assuredly say through his minions he gained; but he will sooner or later have to answer to God for the lies he tells. The three last days we have been fighting day and night. Many have fallen on both sides. I have been spared through all this misery; but have heard balls raining all around me. Now, returned to this place, I have been seized with the cholera, and am in the first stage of the disease. I feel so weak that I cannot write more; but be this my last farewell, and blessings be to my friends! Farewell! OTTO.

Brother! Should fortune smile on you, remember my poor children.

Brother, I promised to write to Col. PHELPS, whom I have to thank for my being here. I cannot write in English to him, for all letters are opened here and read before they are allowed to be sent away. All this, however, is written in Swedish, I hope they will not understand it, and so allow it to pass. Tell PHELPS—who can be seen on Montgomery street—that if he should ever be in need, to beware; hell on earth is here. I think that those who induce people to go to Nicaragua are no better than fallen angels, who, I hope, as I write this on my death bed, won't go free from punishment in another world. OTTO.

[The above letter was inclosed in another epistle which is as follows:

"SIR: I am very sorry that Mr. LINDGROW [OTTO] has made it my duty to send this letter to you in case of his dying. You will perceive, consequently, by my sending it that this event unfortunately has occurred. He died on the 23d December."]

INTERESTING FROM WASHINGTON.

The Administration and Gov. Geary.

Presentation of the New British Minister.

The Scramble for Office—War of the New-York Factions, and Probable Results, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, March 16.

The statement is erroneous that Gov. GEARY's resignation has been received. The President has nothing from him. Secretary CASS has received a telegraphic dispatch from GEARY, requesting that decisive steps be immediately taken to sustain him, and indicating his prompt resignation as the alternative. The subject occupied the Cabinet to-day, throughout a long and earnest discussion. Mr. BUCHANAN's disposition is to sustain GEARY. The Southern Democratic sentiment here is very decidedly in the same direction. The Southern wing of the Cabinet is understood to oppose him, and to urge GEARY's disregard of certain forms, his interference with judicial authority, and his signing an Anti-Democratic Bank Charter, as pretexts for his removal, instead of his Free-State sympathies. I am assured that no decision has been arrived at, and it is impossible to predict the result. If Mr. BUCHANAN insists upon being President himself, GEARY will be sustained, and LECOMPTE removed. The latter step is made an absolute condition by GEARY, which complicates the difficulty. If he would agree to let bygones pass, the question would be settled at once in GEARY's favor. As the matter stands, the South is very clamorous against him, because they will not assent to a blow at LECOMPTE. SAM. SNEADY says that GEARY will triumph.

Symptoms of this bad feeling, engendered by "rotation," are beginning to show themselves, and serious troubles are anticipated unless the prominent appointments are soon settled. The New-York Collectorship continues to be the chief bone of contention. SCHELL's papers are signed by five New-York members, but so far as there are any indications, they rather favor the selection of some eminent merchant, than an active leader of any clique.

The Philadelphia appointments are expected to be made immediately. The Kansas affair is disposed of.

S.

[FROM OUR REGULAR TELEGRAPHIC REPORTER.]

WASHINGTON, Monday, March 16.

Lord NAPIER was, at 1 o'clock to-day, introduced to the President by General CASS, and presented his credentials as Minister from England. His expressions of congratulation and desire to preserve the peace of the two countries were cordially reciprocated by the President. Lord NAPIER was in Court dress. Many visitors at the White House desired to witness the ceremony, but it being of a private character, they were excluded from the audience chamber.

Lord NAPIER, in addressing the President as the Envoy of Her Britannic Majesty, said he was instructed to convey to him the earnest desire maintained by the Queen to preserve and advance on all occasions the interests and happiness of the people of England and America, which are so deeply involved in their amicable intercourse, and to manifest to him the hearty good wishes which her Majesty cherishes for the prosperity of the United States. He ventured to congratulate the President on his accession to the highest elective dignity in the country and the world, saying:

"May you enjoy it in health, peace and ever increasing honor, and may the period of your government be distinguished by all the features of public welfare. Permit me (he continued) to express to you my gratification in being selected to renew and improve at Washington those relations of international friendship which have been so ably sustained by your representative in London. This important and grateful duty might have been committed to others more capable of doing justice to the sentiments of benevolence which animate my sovereign, her ministers, and every order of her subjects, but no one could approach your Excellency with greater respect for your person and your office, or a warmer good-will to the American people."

Lord NAPIER then delivered the credential letter which her Majesty had been graciously pleased to intrust to his care.

The President, in reply, offered to Lord NAPIER a hearty welcome as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from her Britannic Majesty to the United States. Your Sovereign, he said, I am convinced, could not have selected a more acceptable representative than yourself to renew these relations of international friendship which I trust may never hereafter be interrupted. The earnest and gracious desire expressed by her Majesty to preserve and advance upon all occasions the interest and happiness of England and America, and the hearty good wishes which her Majesty cherishes for the prosperity of the United States, are cordially reciprocated on my part, and will elicit an enthusiastic response from the hearts of the American people. No independent powers have ever been bound together by material interests of such magnitude as those which unite Great Britain and the United States. Indeed, the prosperity of the one is necessarily involved in that of the other, but mutual interests, however vast, without mutual regard, are not always sufficient to preserve friendship between nations. How happy then am I to receive the assurance that your sovereign, her ministers, and every order of her subjects, are animated by sentiments of benevolence towards the Government and people of the United States. During my administration it shall be my agreeable duty, as well as my earnest desire, to increase the friendship and mutual good will now so happily subsisting between the two countries, and to render those sentiments strong and enduring. With such sincere and heartfelt dispositions on both sides, should difficulties ever arise between the two Governments, these will be easily adjusted in a spirit of mutual forbearance and concession. I return your Lordship my thanks for your kind expressions and wishes in reference to myself, and feel confident that in our future intercourse we shall proceed harmoniously and satisfactorily in discharging our respective duties.

The Pennsylvania appointments were considered in the Cabinet to-day, but not decided upon. These, together with those of New-York and California, are expected to be disposed of this week, as persons here most interested have been informed.

There seems now to be but little doubt but that the rumor of the resignation of Gov. GEARY is true.

Who are at Washington and what they are there for—The War of the New-York Factions—The Probable Results.

[FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, Sunday, March 15, 1857.

The corridors, staircases and passages of Willard's Hotel are crowded with New-Yorkers, and faces familiar to every man versed in the Democratic politics of the Empire State meet us at every turn. Each train from the East brings a fresh swarm, and the scene of the hotel offices, on the arrival of new guests, reminds one of the bustle and crowd at the Cincinnati Convention. Familiar greetings are heard on every side, and even the candidates for office who behold with secret dismay the arrival of a dangerous competitor, smoothe his face into false smiles as he welcomes him to Washington and inquires the news at home. Hunker and Barnburner,—Hard and Soft,—the men who assassinated CASS eight years ago and the men who "fought, bled and died" for him, (and now hope to be resurrected in the body,)—the men who burned DOUGLAS in effigy in the Anti-Nebraska times, and the men who were burned in effigy along with him,—jostle each other amicably in the lobbies and hob-nob to each other across the dinner-table. In the evening drawing-room, pleasantly chatting with the ladies, may be seen the warriors of your Democratic partisan wars who have been arrayed in hostile camps for twelve years; and in the little groups that stray off occasionally, under the shadow of night, for less innocent entertainment—to "see the elephant" or "fight the tiger,"—a similar fusion of old distinctions, it is feared, might be noted; but hereof your Occasional Correspondent speaketh not from personal knowledge. There are New-Yorkers everywhere. The rural districts contribute an abundant quota, and the City of New-York holds not back. From Niagara to Montauk, and from Oswego to Ogdensburg, they come drifting along, train after train, with carpet bags, trunks and shawls, and the inevitable New-York morning papers, some of them with pockets well lined with salaries, and apprehensive of the awful decree, "Rotation in office;" but by far the most with slender pocket-books, empty bellies and cadaverous forms, yet armed with bundles upon bundles of recommendations and petitions, swelling the mighty crowd which surges against the doors of the Presidential mansion, begging for office.

Your present correspondent, albeit not an uninterested looker-on in Washington, (for there are but few such,) has been immensely amused at the character, purposes and endeavors of this band of pilgrims. He sees in it, struggling along cheek by jowl, the honest, meritorious man of talent and the infamous, brutal rowdy—the gentleman of tone and integrity temporarily brought to the level of the blackguard and the "striker." Modest merit is often hustled aside by impudent pretence; and men with the brand of the convict and felon force their way to audiences which are denied to unobtrusive, but it may be efficacious, party service. It is thus that the world yields to audacity, and tolerates imposition. Your correspondent observes, also, occasional and illustrious instances of the virtue known among men by the name of gratitude; and inasmuch as, from time immemorial, this virtue hath especially appertained to, and adorned, the politician class, he is led to believe that so noble a trait of character still flourishes among these in purity. For instance, yonder Congressman elect, who owes his place and power to the exertions of certain dear and intimate friends, with how much unction he volunteered to them his promises before the election, with how much nonchalance he repudiates and forgets them now! There is much room for melancholy and misanthropic moralizing in a Washington hotel, just after the inauguration of a bran-new President.

New-York is more largely represented at Washington than all other States besides, except California, at this present time. The four years' tenure of many of the most valuable appointments in your State is about expiring, and those who now hold them, and those who want to hold them, along with their respective friends and adherents, consider it necessary to be early upon the ground, to protect their respective interests. Here, then, are to be seen the various cliques and sections, divisions and subdivisions, in all their force; and though nothing can exceed the urbanity, friendliness and amiability of each and all, in public, none can doubt the deep and bitter animosities of rivalry which lie beneath the surface.

The strongest in numbers and the ablest in point of management and tactics, are the Softs, who have been Administration men for the whole term of PIERCE's four years, and, having enjoyed exclusively the spoils of office, find themselves sufficiently "in funds" to endure even the exorbitant board-bills of a Washington hotel. Prominent among their leaders we notice the Barnburner chiefs of 1848, in the portly person of DEAN RICHMOND, the Railroad millionaire; in the classical face of WILLIAM CASSIDY, "the stone that the builders rejected;" and in the dignified form of the ablest presiding officer the New-York Legislature ever saw, Lieutenant-Governor SANFORD E. CHURCH. From the City of New-York, strange to say, there is not a single Soft, except JOHN COCHRANE, for rank and file, officer and private, appear to have marched over to the Republican camp, along with such men of mark as ROBERT EMMET, ANTHONY J. BLEECKER, DAVID DUDLEY FIELD, and WILLIAM C. BRYANT. Alas for the Radical squad which O'SULLIVAN and TILDEN and CARMALBURG once led, in Tammany and in your legislative halls—where are they? Cannot a single respectable Soft be conjured up as a candidate for office, upon all Manhattan Island? Must the obdurate Hards and the malleable Softs divide the spoils between them? Or, if, perchance, a Democratic Hard can be found, who will take the inspiration, then a Young Hard, (Heaven forbid!) Hence comes the cold, experienced and imperious leader of the Barnburner Democracy, is here, and, strange with all this, the gentlemanly Administration Softs, who are laboring to recognize Cushing of your port. CHARWELL's quondam lieutenant, GEORGE J. TUCKER, is also on hand; and JOHN C. MAGUIRE, and other Softs, who have no hope (and Heaven forbid that we can return. FISHER was to go out, and BUCHANAN to come in. These are the remains of the old Cass and Butler wing of the party, the intractable Democratic and incorrigible traitors who supported Fillmore and opposed the claims of the Democratic Party. It is, perhaps, not amiss that of the Hards there are, the left Hunkers, as distinct shown themselves. One of the ablest and purest men of this class, Lieutenant-Governor SEYMOUR, is present, and just in from Utica, their manager and leader in your City. The few that survive have intrenched themselves in the Council of Sixteen of Tammany Hall, whose long-tried Mayor WOOD, and most able statesman, GEORGE J. TUCKER, of the Committee of Sixteen, are now here. Of the partisans of the class of JOHN SCHEIBE, JOHN C. WEBSTER and HONORIO SEYMOUR, not one, I believe, appeared in Washington. I only see JAMES G. DESHON, JOHN M. HOTT and a few others of this species. The Free-Soil Softs of the VAN BUREN stamp, on the contrary, have flocked in from every quarter. Office are WILLIAM H. LUNDY, of Suffolk County; JOHN E. WILLIAM, of Utica; WILLIAM SEWARD JOHNSON, of Cayuga; JAMES M. SCOVILLE, of Washington; RAY TOMPKINS, of Richmond; SEWARD E. JONES, of Livingston; GEORGE W. WEBSTER, of Albany; ISAAC BUTTS, of Rochester, and many others whose knight name.

Since the November election, a number of attempts have been made to get together the members of Congress elect in New-York, in order to make a grand programme for the guidance of Mr. BUCHANAN in the distribution of "the spoils." There being twelve M. C.'s elect from the State, of Democratic faith, and just about twelve or thirteen first class valuable offices in your City to be given away, it was supposed that a schedule of division might pretty be agreed upon, on the simple principle of each member appropriating for himself one office, to be bestowed upon such friend as he might name. By this means Mr. BUCHANAN would be relieved from all trouble, all responsibility, and all exercise of discretion in the matter; and would have nothing left to do but to fill up commissions with the names presented to him. Unfortunately the scheme would not work. The City members would not meet the country members, unless the latter would concede to the former all right and authority as to the awarding of the twelve or thirteen "fat" City appointments. The country members declined to do any such thing, as they expressed, and then the City members made an offer by themselves. At the first interview they also divided into as many parties as there were members present. So matters rested, until the Mayor of your City, Hon. FERNANDO WOOD, appeared on the ground. He arrived on Thursday.

A new attempt is now to be made to agree upon recommendations, but it can be easily predicted that it will fail as signally as before. And all the struggles and quarrelings of the Congressional delegation, it is altogether probable that Mr. BUCHANAN will quietly select out his own men, refuse to be cajoled to, and have the necessary commissions made out without reference to local claims, or distributing among the names of the strongest, most deserving and most active partisans presented to him, except the qualification of good moral character and respectable social standing from all his appointees, and totally ignoring the question of Hard or Soft, Wood or Anti-Wood, whenever the applicant is proven to possess a clean record, free of Free-Soil associations, or party infidelities. This, I say, is probable: it is the course which those who are most intimately permitted to share his confidence predict will be adopted, but whether it will eventually be pursued or not, is a matter for the future to develop.

A harsh and unjust allusion appeared a day or two since in the telegraphic correspondence from this city, published in one of your morning contemporaries—an allusion to a man who, whatever political sins may be laid to his charge, has never yet been accused with truth of taking undue advantage of an enemy, or any advantage at all of a friend. I refer to DANIEL S. DICKINSON. It was charged that he had made out and recommended to Mr. BUCHANAN a list of appointments to be made throughout your State. It is untrue, and your present correspondent happens to know it to be untrue. Mr. DICKINSON has asked nothing upon personal grounds. He may have advised, and I believe he has advised, the appointment by Mr. BUC

We are indebted to Mr. E. W. Hull, Purser of the George Law, for special favors, and to the expresses of Wells, Fargo & Co., Freeman & Co., and the Pacific Express, for papers received with dispatch.

The most important events in California of the fortnight ending Feb. 20, have been the impeachment of two prominent officers of the State Government—the Treasurer and the Comptroller. The developments connected with this action are not of a character calculated to lessen the effect of the late decision of the Supreme Court on the value of our State bonds at the East; especially as it would seem that the disclosures already made are but the forerunners of others equally important. The State Treasurer, Henry Bates, was impeached by a unanimous vote of the Assembly, and specific charges have since been presented to the Senate, the body before which the trial of the accused official will be conducted. In the case of the Comptroller, action was not taken with the same promptness and unanimity, it being difficult to determine the extent of his complicity in the delinquencies which have been committed in his department, and it is possible that the contumacy and stubbornness with which he met the investigations instituted by the Assembly had as much to do with his impeachment as the facts which were disclosed by those researches. In addition to these measures, it is probable that criminal proceedings will be instituted against both the delinquent officials.

The whereabouts of the $134,000 pretended to have been devoted to the payment of the California July interest in New-York is still a matter of doubt and speculation. The person most likely to be aware of its location, E. A. Rowe, pertinaciously refused to answer any questions leading to a solution of the difficulty, whether propounded by a Legislative Committee, a judge, or a Grand Jury. The result has been his committal and incarceration for contempt in two instances, and his release by the Supreme Court from the imprisonment resulting from the first. For the second (which consisted in refusing to answer questions before the Grand Jury of Sacramento County) he is still in custody. It was rumored that the abstraction of the sum in question was a portion of a grand scheme of peculation, some reflections and hints in relation to which have appeared in our Sacramento correspondence.

The validity of the State debt, and the action in relation thereto has been a topic considerably discussed in the Legislature, a variety of bills, resolutions, &c., in relation to it having been introduced since the commencement of the session. No definite measures have, however, been resolved upon.

The decision of the Supreme Court, declaring the Consolidation Act of San Francisco constitutional, is one of most important character as affecting her interests. Whatever may be the defects of the bill, it would have been a great misfortune, had it been declared unconstitutional.

The daring outrages committed by Mexican bandits in the southern portion of California have drawn down on their perpetrators summary retribution. The native population of that section of the State, native Californian and American, appear to have united in the undertaking, and with the effective assistance of United States troops from adjacent posts, their efforts have been crowned with success. All the band has been captured, with the exception of two, and all the prisoners have been executed, except Juan Flores, whose punishment was temporarily deferred.

Two distinct shocks of an earthquake were felt in San Francisco about 7 o'clock, P. M., on the 5th of February. The sensation was not as on former occasions of a rocking or oscillating motion, but resembled the sudden jar as of an explosion of powder. Much consternation was manifested throughout the city, but no great damage done.

Sixty-five men embarked from San Francisco on the steamship Sea Bird, on the 5th of February, with the intention of joining the forces of Gandara in the Mexican State of Sonora. They are to be joined by others who go overland to San Diego, and it is said that they are to be furnished with United States arms.

Jose Y. Limantour, having been liberated on bail, left San Francisco on the steamer of the 5th February for Acapulco.

An encounter took place on the evening of the 11th February, at the corner of Washington and Dupont streets, between P. A. Cohen, brother of A. A. Cohen, and Thomas S. King, editor of the Evening Bulletin. Mr. Cohen struck Mr. King upon the head with a cane, whereupon Mr. King drew a pistol and shot Mr. C., the ball striking him in the side of the chin, and passing along the lower jaw, came out near the ear. Both parties were arrested. King was liberated on his own recognizance, and Cohen held to bail in $1,000, for his appearance to answer at the Police Court. The matter was called up for trial on the 17th inst., and resulted in the conviction of Mr. Cohen of an assault and battery. He was fined $50. Mr. King's trial for an assault with a deadly weapon had not yet taken place.

A great quantity of rain had fallen over all the country drained by the San Joaquin and Sacramento rivers and their tributaries. Considerable damage had been done in different localities by the sudden floods. The whole country around Stockton was overflowed; and the usual roads were quite as well fitted for boating as for staging.

The stage between Angel's Camp and San Andres was stopped by a company of robbers on the morning of the 17th February, and robbed of $15,000—$10,000 belonging to Wells, Fargo & Co., and $5,000 to Pacific Express Co. The robbers were subsequently arrested and the money recovered.

The Governor has issued his proclamation for an election of Senator to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Hon. Frank Tillotson. The election was ordered for Tuesday, Feb. 24.

The brig J. S. Ostet arrived at San Francisco on the 19th February, from La Paz, bringing intelligence that Gen. Blancarte had seized all the vessels in the port of La Paz, and put them under an embargo. Gen. B. was to leave in a few days with 200 men for the City of Mexico.

Mrs. Julia Dean Hayne and Miss Mary Provost were playing engagements at the Sacramento theatres.

The Oregon papers contain nothing of importance. The Legislature had adjourned.

The Indians had been making an outbreak near Fort Boise. Four whites have been captured, and a large number of cattle stolen.

The Washington Territory Legislature adjourned on the 29th of January. The session has been mostly occupied in reviewing and condemning the course of Gov. Stevens in the martial law affair and the late Indian war; the balance with business principally local. One or two counties had been formed.

Defalcation and Impeachment of State Officers.

From the Alta California.

Upon the departure of the last mail steamer for the Atlantic, our eastern readers were informed of some of the circumstances attending the transfer of $124,000 from the State Treasury. Since then articles of impeachment have been presented against the State Treasurer, who, finding himself hemmed about by a state of facts which he could not, or would not explain, saw fit to tender his resignation, which was duly accepted. Articles of impeachment are now in preparation also against the Comptroller, and although it does not as yet appear that he has been criminal in his acts, his culpable negligence and disregard of the law has been such as to render his course a proper subject of investigation.

It certainly appears unfortunate, at a first glance, for the credit and honor of our State, that in the present condition of its finances its highest financial officer should be criminally charged, as Dr. Bates now is, and peculiarly unfortunate that this charge should come directly following the decision of the Supreme Court, virtually annulling our obligation to pay the indebtedness which has been created in years past. Here, however, we can assure our Atlantic readers, that we look upon these investigations and developments as heralds of a new and brighter era in the administration of our affairs. We have been officially robbed ever since we became a State, and we have quietly submitted without even a murmur. But endurance has ceased now to be a virtue, and the investigations now in progress will be to place us upon a more secure financial foundation—to secure to us in the future a purer and better and more honest and honorable administration of our financial affairs. From present appearances we are fully convinced that there will be no whitewashing practiced in this matter, but that a full and complete investigation will be had, and that the guilty participants will receive proper punishment.

The confidence expressed in most of the journals of the East, in our willingness and ability to meet all the demands against us, finds a warm response in the hearts and dispositions of the large majority of our people. The cry of "Repudiation" raises but a very faint echo here. All the journals of this State, of any respectability of character, have opposed the very idea from the beginning, and already a set of resolutions have been introduced in each branch of the Legislature, declaring the intentions of the people in this matter, as well as a bill for the refunding of all our past created indebtedness. Our Atlantic creditors need have no fear but that all will yet be right.

Horrible Indian Outrage.

ALL THE INHABITANTS IN PIT RIVER VALLEY, IN SHASTA COUNTY, MASSACRED—PROPERTY DESTROYED, ETC.

Mr. A. M. Rosborough has furnished the following information to the Shasta Republican:

Messrs. Whitman and Fowler left Shasta on the 20th of January, and arrived in Pitt Valley on Sunday, when the awful, horrible fact presented itself to them, that not only the whole property of the valley had been destroyed by the Indians, but, still more horrible and awful, that every soul in the valley had, almost beyond the possibility of a doubt, been murdered by the Indians. H. A. Lockhart, A. Boles, R. Rogers, (father of the young men who have been running expresses in the northern portion of this State for several years,) a young man called Daniel Bryant, and a German, who attended to the ferry-boat, (being five in number,) are known to be among the missing, and probably were all that were in the valley at the time. The largest number of the inhabitants had left with the intention of returning in the Spring. Samuel Lockhart, Mr. Holes, and others, had gone down to Red Bluff, at the last accounts, and others came to this place and vicinity about Christmas. Mr. Whitman says that when Mr. Fowler and he got to the nearest ferry in Pitt *River Valley on their way from this place, they dis*covered that the houses were burned and the ferry boat gone; that, thinking that it might have been burned by accident, they built a raft, crossed the river and went on towards the furthest ferry. That a short time after they crossed the river, they discovered eight Indians coming towards them. Two of the Indians turned back and destroyed the raft, (as they afterwards discovered,) while six followed after them at a distance of 500 or 600 yards until they arrived at the ferry. Here they saw that the houses, which had been situated beyond the river, had all been burnt, that a large number of cattle and horses had been slaughtered by the Indians. The sad and terrible fact that the inhabitants had all been butchered by the Indians burst fully upon them. Being well armed they kept the Indians at bay, and called a young Indian boy on the opposite bank of the river and asked him where Pachee (an Oregon Indian who had been living at Lockhart's) was. He would give them no satisfaction as to the fact of the whites being murdered.

Seeing Indians running in different directions (as they supposed to procure reinforcements to attack them) they turned back, and keeping the Indians at a distance by presenting their guns at them, they arrived at the nearest ferry, where they had left the raft. But finding it was gone, they turned down the river to try and wade it at a wide shoally place. By this time the number of Indians had increased to fifteen. Being weak already from hunger and hard walking on snow shoes, they did not think they could wade the deep, swift stream without drowning, so they kept on down the river to the forks, at the Great Falls. Here they found an old Indian, and asked him to bring them across the river in a old canoe. He consented with an alacrity that made them suspect that he would turn them overboard with the canoe, as it is reported they did Freaner and his party. They got into the canoe, and as the old Indian got in, Whitman took the paddle from him, at the same time presenting his revolver at his breast, told him to sit still, and while in this position, Fowler paddled the canoe across the stream. The fifteen Indians, still dodging after them, crossed over also. They stopped at the place where Rogers and Boles' house had been burned on the bank of the river, and keeping the Indians at bay, built a fire, as it was late in the evening. About dusk they discovered all the Indians going in the direction of an Indian rancheria, some distance off. They stirred the fire and then slipped down the bank of the river and crawled along up the margin of the stream, escaped the vigilance of the Indians, and traveling all night, neither saw nor heard anything more of them. During seven days, including part of the time going down, they had nothing to eat but a dog, which they killed and devoured.

They left Shasta Valley, in going down, with enough provisions, as they supposed to do them through; but it took them two or three times as long as they expected, to get through, and their supply having been exhausted several days before, they were forced to kill and eat a part of the dog they had with them. And this was all they had to eat for the seven days, until they reached Chapman's, where they got some flour—having been three days at one time without eating. A. M. Rosborough.

Capture and Execution of Eleven Mexican Banditti at Los Angeles—Great Excitement.

The following narrative is abridged from the Los Angeles Star and Santa Barbara Gazette:

Our previous advices from Los Angeles, which were to the 29th January, gave the intelligence of the murder of Sheriff Barton and three others, by Mexican banditti. After the burial of the bodies of the murdered, the citizens of Los Angeles formed themselves into four companies. Parties of mounted men were also sent off at the same time in the direction where the robbers were supposed to be.

Dr. Griffin was invested with the command of the entire force of the city, cooperating with the Mayor and City Marshal. Before daybreak on the 30th, the town was surrounded, and every avenue of escape strictly guarded, and a search was commenced of every house north and east of the Plaza. About 40 prisoners, the result of the examination, were taken and lodged in the city jail. On the 31st, a company of United States troops from Fort Tejon, numbering 44 men, under the command of Lieut. Measures, arrived and encamped in the upper part of the city. Miguel Blanco has been arrested and confined. He has confessed his participation in the Twist robbery, and the names of the entire party. Miguel Soto is dead. He was shot in the thigh, when he left his horse and took refuge in a marsh, covering his body up with mud and weeds. The weeds were set on fire, which exposed the robber, when he was shot through the heart. Juan Vasquez, Pedro Lopez and Diego Navarro are also dead, all members of the robber gang. They were tried and sentenced to be hung. The ropes broke in the course of the execution, when they were led out and shot.

We are informed that five of the robbers were chased to the top of a hill in the San Juan mountains, and being hardly pressed, they all spurred their ponies over a precipice some 300 feet high, whereby three men and their horses were disabled. The men were immediately shot. The other two succeeded in effecting their escape. Two men belonging to the party have been taken in San Buenaventura, Juan Leon mentioned above, was been taken.

On Tuesday, Feb. 3, a party consisting of five persons, started out on an expedition to Santa Barbara. Two of the party proceeded as the bearer of sun dispatches, and the others went on to their destination. Information was given to the people at the Mission that the captain of the gang of robbers would arrive that night in town, and men were stationed to guard the approaches, and a spy sent to reconnoitre. Shortly after two men approached, sliding on a horse, and on meeting the spy, asked him if there was any excitement in town, to which he answered there was not, and they continued their course in conversation with the runner. When arrived within the line of ambuscade, the spy, a Californian, called out, "Here they are, take them," at this they both fleeted from the horse and ran. The party in ambush fired at them, but did not shoot them; they then gave chase and succeeded in taking one of them—the other made his escape. The man arrested proved to be Jesus Ezetenos, one of the gang who murdered Sheriff Barton and his party. He was tried by the people and condemned to death. He was accordingly executed. Previous to which he made a confession of his participation in the crimes charged against him.

On the return of Mr. E. H. Rubottom and party from Santa Barbara, they proceeded to the house of a man named Berryessa, whom they arrested and brought to trial. It appears that he had been tried and found guilty of a murder in Santa Clara County, had been ordered to be executed, and that he had been actually hung up, but being cut down before life became extinct, the body was given over to his friends, who effected his resuscitation. The mark of the rope still remained on his neck. Since then, he committed another murder. These facts having been proved satisfactorily, he was also condemned and executed.

On their return to town, and when about fifteen miles from Buenaventura, they discovered a man in a rather suspicious position, and acting as if striving to avoid detection. He was arrested, brought to town, and lodged in jail, but as nothing has been elicited to incriminate him, we decline giving his name.

A meeting of the citizens of Los Angeles was held on Monday, Feb. 9, when it was resolved to postpone action in the case of Juan Flores and others, now in jail, till Saturday the 14th.

The people having taken the administration of justice into their own hands, the death penalty has been inflicted on the following persons:

Juan Cayuno, alias Guerro Ardillero, Jose Santos, Diego Navarra, Pedro Lopez, Juan Valenzuela, Jesus Espinosa, Juan Berryessa, and three others, names unknown.

Besides these, Juan Flores, the captain of the gang, is in custody, awaiting execution; making, in all, twelve persons, whose lives had been devoted to robbery and murder.

Before the execution of Espinosa, he made a full confession to his spiritual adviser. He said that the band of thieves and murderers, with which he was connected, was composed of ten persons. Their organization dated back one month, in which time four murders were committed.

The money appropriated by the Legislature for the counties of Los Angeles and San Bernardino, has been received—also the arms forwarded by the Quartermaster's Department.

The citizens of San Diego and the whole lower country had organized bands to scour the country in pursuit of the robbers. A number of suspicious persons had been captured and was in confinement.

A detachment of the United States troops, stationed at that post, were sent in the direction of San Luis Rey, to prevent the escape of the robbers into Lower California. The troops were under the command of Lieut. Minor and Sergeant Elijah H. Brown. A number of Mexicans were captured at San Luis.

A party of Indians, under an intelligent Chief, by the name of Mariano, had sent dispatches directly across the mountains, towards Temecula and San Juan, to arrest all suspicious persons.

IMPORTANT FROM NEW-GRANADA.

Message of the President—The Massacre of the 15th of April—The Report of the Secretary of State—Little Chance of a Settlement with the United States—Interview between Mr. Morse and the Secretary of State—Miscellaneous.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

Panama, Friday, March 6, 1857.

The principal topic of discussion among the American and other foreign population for several days past, has been the Message of the President of New-Granada, or rather such portions of it as relates to the pending question of the massacre of the 15th of April. I have translated it for you, and you may judge from it what chance there is of an amicable adjustment of our difficulties, so long as President Mallarino and his Cabinet remain in power.

MESSAGE.

The lamentable events of the 15th April, of which Panama was the theatre, that have been so misrepresented in default of reliable testimony, and misjudged from a lack of knowledge of the causes to *which they owed their origin, have given rise to re*clamations on the part of the United States, through a Special Commissioner to this Government. No sooner had the first rumors of these occurrences reached the ears of the Executive than orders were given to proceed against their authors, and to punish the culpable to the full extent of the law. Orders were also given to take the evidence of persons of responsibility as to the origin and progress of the riot, which was represented as a premeditated attack of the people of Panama upon inoffensive passengers, and as a barbarous act which might possibly be repeated. It was also falsely charged that neither the national authorities or those of the State made any efforts to give protection to the transit route. *Upon such misrepre*sentations, the duty of the Republic to satisfy whatever claims might be made against it is based.

According to the most respectable and impartial testimony, it is certain that the lamentable affair of the 15th April was caused by the unjustifiable conduct of an American named Jack Oliver, in having fired a pistol upon a Granadian who was selling fruit. The dispute which followed was taken up by the Americans, either because they wished to rescue Oliver from the police, or because the natives undertook to defend their countryman. The tumult soon increased; most of the passengers, without waiting to judge that they could use them with propriety, joined against the citizens of the country, who, they believed to be insulting a fellow-countryman, who was proved to treat badly. A similar following which no human power could prevent. The excitement was on the side of the passengers, who provided themselves with arms, while the natives had none.

The Governor of the State, accompanied by the United States Consul, presented themselves in the midst of the contending, and prevailed upon the natives to suspend their fire. Unhappily, the Consul could not quiet the passengers, and they fired from the railroad depôt upon him and the Governor. It was impossible, then, to calm the furious multitude; and notwithstanding that the Governor was heard, and it was of no use to try to prevent the calamity. The Consul quit the ground, and the Governor, persuaded that his presence was useless, returned to the city.

Two notable facts are clearly demonstrated from out the confusion in which the affair of the 15th of April is thrown. The first, that Jack Oliver fired a pistol upon a native, without reason, and that was the immediate cause of the tumult; the second, that the Governor endeavored to quiet the natives, and that the riot commenced anew when the passengers fired from the depôt and from the various hotels upon the authorities and upon the people. These facts, whose authenticity is only questioned by the blindest partiality, demonstrate that the people of Panama, docile and humane, like all the people of New-Granada, were not the aggressors in the tumult, and that it was without premeditation on their part. They obeyed the voice of the magistrates; and had it not been for the unjustifiable tenacity of the passengers, we should not have to lament the excesses which the police, in the midst of a furious multitude, were insufficient to prevent. There were excesses, without doubt, as there always are in all countries, under like circumstances; but excesses which were committed by foreign workmen imported into the country by the Railroad Company, and abandoned by it in Panama, without means to live, or to return to their own country; there were excesses; but to the honor of the people of Panama, it is my duty to say that they were fewer than might have been expected, in view of the universal excitement, and the hour of the aggression. Eighteen men killed in an obstinate nocturnal combat, in which a blind multitude was engaged, is neither proof of ferocity, thirst for blood, or of premeditation. History teaches us that in all countries, under similar circumstances, the number of victims had been infinitely greater.

Since the time of the discovery of gold in California, the Isthmus has been traversed by an infinite number of passengers, and by vast sums of gold. There was no railroad, and persons and property sought the aid of the native people, as well by the deserted shores of the Chagres as in the solitary road of Cruces. Nothing would have been easier than to have attacked these travelers and robbed them of their property, had not the people been possessed of an exquisite morality. Was there then security in the transit? Yes, the most complete; and it can be said without exaggeration, that in no country in the world could there have passed with impunity, through vast solitudes, such prodigious sums of money as have traversed the Isthmus of Panama.

There was complete security then, there is now, and there was always, for the passengers and for their goods, without the aid of a numerous armed force. The affair of the 15th April, provoked by the brutal attack of an American, and the rashness and obstinacy of the passengers, only proves that it is not well to abuse the patience of a people, however humane, long-suffering and hospitable they may be accounted. In Panama, as well as in all parts of the Republic, foreigners, without distinction, have enjoyed not only the most complete security, but have been the objects of the greatest benevolence. To pretend that any of those who traverse the Isthmus have a right to fire upon the people, and that these must humbly submit to the assault, is the height of absurdity and injustice. A people who would suffer it do not deserve to live; such ignominy would rot the heart of the nation.

The responsibility of the unfortunate affair of the 15th April does not rest upon New-Granada, and *there is nothing to be feared for the security of the fu*ture transit of the Isthmus of Panama. The authorities of the State count upon the necessary means to maintain order; and if, at any time in questions essentially internal, it has accepted the services of a foreigner (meaning Ram Rumbell's guard, I suppose,) to reestablish public tranquility, it has not been from necessity. Ample means are at its own disposal to such an end.

M. M. MALLARINO, President.
LINO DE POMBO, Sec. of State.
R. NUNEZ, Sec. of the Treasury.
JOSE MARIA ORTEGA, Sec. of War.

A FEW REMARKS ON THE MESSAGE.

The President carefully avoids the real question at issue with the United States. In fact, he ignores the main points entirely. Were there robberies? Were there murders? Were there assassinations? Yes. Who committed them? Citizens of New-Granada. Where are the murderers, and assassins, and robbers? In Panama. Has the Government ever chastised one of them, or made a single effort to do it? No. By whose orders and through whose instrumentality were sixteen out of the eighteen murders committed? By the order and through the instrumentality of Francisco de Fabrega, Governor of the State of Panama. Has he ever been punished? On the contrary, he has been rewarded with the highest judicial office in the gift of the State.

It is scarcely necessary to remark upon all the glaring misstatements and foolish inferences of the President. Many of them are reflected on the face of the document. But I will make mention of a few of them. The President intimates that the riot was aggravated by the attempt of the Americans to rescue Oliver from the police. Oliver was never in the hands of the police. There was no police on the ground until the curtain fell upon the first act of the drama, in which Dunois and Marks were killed. He says the Americans were generally armed with revolvers, while the natives were unarmed! Verily! Eighteen Americans killed, while only one negro was made to bite the dust, would seem to bear the President out in this position. American experience in Mexico and Central America would also justify it. How carefully the President ignores the fact that sixteen or eighteen police fired volley after volley into the depôt, at the sound of a bugle and by command of the Governor! The Governor, he says, accompanied by the United States Consul, arrived on the ground, and prevailed upon the natives to cease their attack. This is an absolute falsehood. The Governor was not on the ground until the riot was completely ended—and it was by his order that the depôt was fired upon and the massacre renewed. The Americans, he admits, were confined to the depôt and the hotels. They did not sally out to kill anybody. They were not firing upon the city—were they? They were not attacking anything belonging to the natives. They were in the depôt and the hotels, where they belonged. Well, then, if they fired at all, (which is disputed,) it must have been for the purpose of repelling an attack. Why didn't the Governor take the negroes off? They had no business there—and if they stayed there it must have been to provoke, to hostilize, to rob, to murder the passengers. Sixteen more dead bodies attested this. Diamond rings, sold openly in the streets for five days after, at a dollar a piece, and gold watches for a mere song, bear out the proposition. "They fired upon the Governor," did they? Why, the Governor was never in a position, during the massacre, for a musket-ball to hit him. As soon as he gave the order for his brutal police to fire upon the men, women and children in the depôt, he made tracks for home, and locked himself in. What folly about the "unjustifiable tenacity" of the passengers! Tenacious in what? In keeping in the depôt? What did the negroes want to get them out for? Why didn't they go away and let them alone, if they didn't want to be fired upon? Clearly because they saw the Governor was working with them, whether he meant it or not: and they wanted to get the passengers out so as to rob them—which they finally did, and to their hearts' content.

But beyond and above all this, every Government is bound to maintain the rights of foreigners, and guarantee their safety within its jurisdiction, in accordance with facts and treaties. It will not do for them to plead poverty and lack of power to do it. If they cannot do it they must suffer for their misfortune. If they cannot pay, they have no right to exist —and somebody ought to take the rule from them.

POMBO'S REPORT.

Lino de Pombo, Secretary of State, in his report to Congress, takes up the subject more at large, but even in a worse view than the President. He denies the right in toto of the United States to indemnity. He recounts the various outrages committed by Americans en route to California, on this Isthmus—speaks of their general lawless character—of their fancied superiority to everybody else—and of their contempt for the natives of the country. He tells an anecdote of Charlene Duane in illustration. The incident happened in 1850, at the riot in which one or two Americans were killed. The Governor of Panama, he says, was standing in the street, conversing with the American Consul, when an American walked up to him and knocked his hat off, exclaiming: "Take your hat off, Sir, when you address the American Consul!" He quotes the Baltimore election murders to show that he Panamenos are not the only people that require coaking after, and also the outrages committed in California upon the Spanish race. General Mosquera, who, since his "burst-up" in New-York, seems to be sadly afflicted with a sort of Anti-American-phobia, comes to his aid with a history of the Chatham Chapel riots, in New-York, in 1834—of the Bowery Theatre riots, on account of the English actor Farren—of the attack and robbery of the houses of Arthur Tappan and the minister Cox—of the burning and gutting of the negro churches—and, lastly, of the Charlestown Convent burning, in none of which either the National, State or Municipal Governments indemnified the sufferers. As if these facts (if true) were any analogy to questions between two distinct nations! Wonder if Mr. Pomeroy ever heard of the Cincinnati riots? Wonder if the Spanish or Spanish Government ever indemnified Spanish or Spanish citizens?

It would be useless to make out a case against our citizens, quoting some of the evidence taken here in behalf of the Railroad Company, and lays particular stress upon the report of Count de Sauvage, French Consul to Panama. Indeed, he seems to rely principally upon the infamous slanders and falsehoods of this officer for his defence.

Mr. Pomeroy states that the testimony of several of the Consuls was not in as accidents to the steamer on the river, which he regrets. As the best evidence, in the aggregate, is understood to bear rather hard against the Government side of the question, it was a lucky accident for Mr. Pombo. But it is a little singular that the testimony adverse to the Americans should only have been saved. However, in the testimony of Mr. Fenner, British Consul, there is a little paragraph which the Secretary discharges without comment, but in which is comprised the main point of the American argument. It is this: "Mr. Fenner considered unnecessary, and unwarranted with military violence the order of attack upon the depôt, given by the Governor, because the passengers were notoriously badly armed, and had among them many women and children."

THE CHANGES OF REVOLUTIONS.

You will judge from the spirit manifested in these two official papers, that there is little chance of the demands of the United States upon New-Granada being seconded to. Mr. Moran, our Special Commissioner, presented his credentials to the Government at Bogota, on the 27th January, and subsequently he and our Minister, Mr. Bowlin, had an interview with the Secretary of State. Mr. Moran commenced the conversation by saying that, in view of the sentiments contained in the President's Message and the Secretary's report, he supposed there would be very little use in laying his demands and propositions of the United States before the Government. Mr. Pombo replied that the positions therein assumed did not necessarily preclude discussion of the subject. Mr. Moran rejoined that he did not come to Bogota to discuss the right of the United States to indemnity. The case of the United States was made out to its satisfaction. Mr. Pombo, thereupon, finding matters coming too near to a focus, suddenly adjourned an important engagement that had slipped his mind when he granted the interview, and bowed the two diplomats out of his bureau. We have reports here that both Minister and Commissioner had demanded their passports; but I doubt if they are true.

The Cabinet, on this question, are in perfect accord with the sentiments of the President's message. A majority of both Houses of Congress indorse them. The present Government goes out of power on the 1st April, and will not take the responsibility of doing anything towards the settlement of the question. The new President, Ospina, is anxious, above everything else, to arrange peacably all questions at issue with foreign governments. He cares nothing for Panama and the Isthmus. He would even sell it, if he dared to do so—but there's the rub. Fillibusterism has done its work in embittering the Spanish race on this coast against us. The people have been made to believe that the wrong in the 15th April massacre was wholly on our side. Altogether, the chances of an amicable understanding appear rather remote. Perhaps, the matter of the indemnity might be arranged—but this is not the most important part of the business. The Government of New-Granada will never give perfect security to the transit of the Isthmus. The State has no means to do it. If it could afford the money, the soldiers and police employed would all be negroes and Indians, who, in any similar outbreak to that of the 15th April, would do as the police on that occasion did—join in the massacre.

TONNAGE AND POSTAL TAX.

In regard to the tonnage tax and postal tax, the Secretary takes the ground that they are legal and in accordance with treaties. In relation to the military says: "The Government of the United States has sent to Bogota a Special Commissioner to arrange questions already referred to. Let us treat upon them with calmness and in perfect good faith, and the solution will be prompt and satisfactory."

The votes for President were verified by Congress the 4th ult., and Ospina was declared duly elected. There was no disturbance on the occasion, as some seemed to apprehend.

Monsenor Lorenzo Barilli, Nuncio of the Pope, has been replaced by Señor Lendorowski, a young Pole.

PANAMA.

We have nothing of particular interest here. The steamer Panama, chartered by the Railroad Company to replace the Columbus in the Central American trade, sailed on the 21st. The Sierra Nevada, with news from Walker at Rivas, is expected here about the 16th.

It is said that arrangements are in progress by which it is hoped quasi for the United States will be shipped across this Isthmus.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

We anticipated that letters from reliable sources in Costa Rica, have been received by the George Law, putting an entirely different complexion upon the news which had previously reached us from Col. LOCKRIDGE.

It is stated that the engagement at Hippa' Point amounted to nothing at all, and that the Costa Ricans retired in perfectly good order,—losing no arms and suffering no defeat. It was believed that they had withdrawn in pursuance of a pre-arranged plan, to permit Col. LOCKRIDGE to go up the river as far as Castillo, and then to cut off his retreat. The report that Castillo had been taken is said to be wholly without foundation,—we had Col. LOCKRIDGE captured 400 rifles, as was previously reported. The Costa Ricans are very confident that an attack upon San Carlos, if made by the American force, will be repulsed, as the fort is well defended; and it is thus designed to cut off the retreat of the assailants, and prevent their joining any reinforcements that may arrive from the United States. Nothing decisive or very reliable, in regard to these matters, can be known until the arrival of the Tennessee, which will be due here in about a week. The letter which we publish this morning, signed "THE VOICE OF NICARAGUA," will be found to present in a very strong light the views of those who oppose the Walker movement, and contains information of decided value in forming a judgment of the actual state of affairs in that country. The J. L. Stephens, which was in here this Tuesday a few hours later than the Sierra Nevada, would, it is said, carry down 300 recruits for General WALKER.

The George Law, which arrived at this port yesterday morning, brought the California mail of Feb. 28, and $196,000 in treasure. The most important intelligence received by this steamer is that the impeachment of Dr. BATES, State Treasurer of California, for a defalcation amounting to $124,000. This sum, according to the statement of the accused, (a statement which he has failed to make good,) was paid over to the Pacific Express Company for transmission to the East to meet the July interest on the State Bonds. An impeachment had been also brought forward in the Assembly against Mr. WHITMAN, the State Comptroller, for malfeasance in office. A decision of the Supreme Court, in favor of the constitutionality of the act consolidating the City and County of San Francisco, gives general satisfaction to the people. From Los Angeles accounts are received of the capture and execution of eleven Mexican banditti who had committed terrible depredations in that neighborhood. A horrible massacre had been perpetrated by the Indians in Pitt River Valley, Shasta County. Every soul in the settlement was murdered, and a large amount of property was destroyed.

Advices from La Paz, Lower California, to the 10th of January, state that the Mexican General, ELEGUARTE, had declared against the Government, and had seized all the vessels in that port. It was reported that he was about to march for the City of Mexico with a force of 700 men.

We have dates from Salt Lake to the 17th o' February. Some of the delayed emigrant trains had arrived, after having suffered great hardship from the severity of the weather. The small-pox had again broken out in the valley. ORSON HYDE and party had arrived safely.

We receive by the George Law later advices from the Sandwich Islands and from Australia, but there is no news of importance to notice.

In our Panama Correspondent's letter will be found such portions of the message of the President of New-Granada as refer to the late massacre on the Isthmus. From the tenor of the message, as well as from the report of the Secretary of State, it appears that the New-Granadian Government are not disposed to accord satisfaction for the outrages and murders committed by their people on the 15th of April last. It is proper, however, to wait until the result of Mr. MORSE's mission is known ere we condemn the New-Granadian Government for attempting to screen the perpetrators of that most abominable outrage upon American citizens.

Our Correspondent gives an interesting account of recent revolutionary movements in Peru. We see no reason to alter an opinion, expressed some time ago upon this subject, that the revolution under VIVANCO could only be successful after a protracted struggle. According to present appearances, it does not seem probable that VIVANCO will be successful at all, for he is not certainly gaining ground, and President CASTILLA is working with an energy that makes him a very formidable opponent to his ambitious rival.

The new British Minister, Lord NAPIER, was yesterday introduced to the President, and presented his credentials, with the usual formalities.

Our usual telegraphic summary of the proceedings of the Legislature will be found elsewhere. Various matters occupied attention yesterday.

It is stated that the emigration to Kansas, thus far, this season, fully equals anything of the kind ever known in the Western country. Extra trains have been put on the Pacific Railroad, out of St. Louis, to connect with the steamers for the Territory.

Gov. GRANT and his Private Secretary, Dr. GUTHE, were yesterday at St. Louis, on their way to the East.

A special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held at the Merchants' Bank, yesterday, for the purpose of hearing the report of the Committee appointed to take into consideration the proposed equalization of Canal Tolls. Mr. C. BARROW, chairman of the first named Committee, read the report, which set forth that the Committee had examined the memorial to the Legislature of the State upon the necessity of enlarging the canals, and fully concur in its general tenor so far as it urges the enlargement of the canals, but do not concur with it in the manner suggested for raising the necessary means for carrying it into effect, $9,700,000. The report urges the raising of this sum by a direct tax of one mill per one hundred dollars of personal property owned by every citizen of the State, and concludes by recommending for adoption a series of resolutions, the purport of which was the recommendation of such a tax to be levied by the Legislature. The report and resolutions were adopted.

The Commission on a site for a Post-Office was to have met yesterday, but there was not a quorum present, and consequently there was nothing done. The Aldermanic Committee on that gold mantle box met yesterday afternoon, and resolved to open a correspondence with ALBERT TILLOTSON, Jr., for the purpose of learning whether, if the most valiant patriot should be found, he would comply with the requirements of the will. Alderman MCCOUNAN was appointed Chairman, and Councilman KENNARD, Secretary of the Committee.

The Aldermanic Committee on the Union Ferries met again yesterday. Several witnesses were examined, but there was nothing new elicited, other than the statement of Mr. HAVEMEYER, who said he sold Roosevelt-street Ferry to the Company for $120,000; that the losses then averaged $60 per day, and that he had reason to believe the travel would decrease.

There was nothing of special importance done in the Board of Aldermen last evening, other than the appointment of a Special Committee, to examine and report whether a City Insurance Department would be a desirable addition to the City Government.

In the Board of Councilmen last night, Councilman HOFFMAN's election was determined to be valid. A solid gold badge was decreed (10 to 4) to the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, and a silver one to each of his assistants, as tending to make them more conspicuous at fires—the expense of the die not to exceed $500. The hour of meetings of the Boards is to be 6 o'clock hereafter, instead of 5. Look out for a garroted Chief Engineer on the sidewalk some foggy morning. That solid gold medal will be an awful temptation to somebody to strangle HARRY HOWARD.

The Councilmen ask the Mayor (who is he now —WOOD or CLANCY?) to station Policemen on each side the Park, to prevent carriages travelling through Beekman-avenue, on which noble plain the City Hall fronts.

What has become of the Crystal Palace? The question was discussed again by the Councilmen's Committee on Lands and Places yesterday, but no determination was reached. We earnestly hope it will not be wanted.

The will of Mrs. ELIZABETH GELSTON has been offered for probate before the Surrogate. It gives some $20,000 to different charitable institutions and religious societies of this City and Philadelphia. The testatrix was a daughter of the late JOHN GELSTON, formerly a merchant of this City.

CHIMMONO, the Chiloaman and his Gipsy wife, were before the United States Commissioner again yesterday, as complainants and witnesses against the captain and mate of the brig Escorieza, for alleged abuse and cruelty.

It was easy to strike bottom in Broadway with a ten-foot pole yesterday, in spite of the mud. Notwithstanding the temptation, nobody was out calling in that beautiful promenade.

A Lecture upon Church Music, by S. PARKESSON TUCKERMAN, Esq., Doctor of Music, was delivered at Hope Chapel on Monday evening. It embodied some valuable strictures upon church music in this Country.

Brooklyn is in the enjoyment of at least two profound excitements. Now, the cars lie still on Sundays, and Brooklyn, one day in seven, is as still as a rural district. But Mayor POWELL has advised that the cars be run on that day as usual. The Common Council are evidently disposed that way, though the Committee to which they referred the subject, gives ample time and opportunity for the people to express their thought, for or against it. Last evening, there was a crowded meeting in the City Hall, (Supreme Court room,) of those favorable to the Sunday car travel. The call was notable for being signed by two clergymen—the venerable DOMINIE JOHNSON, (Episcopalian,) and Rev. Mr. HATCH, (Independent Methodist.) The meeting was addressed by Judge MORRIS, Rev. Mr. HATCH, and a Friend, Mr. NICHOLS.

The other excitement is about steam in Atlantic-street. The Long Island Railroad is privileged by a Legislative act to steam their cars through to South Ferry. But the Atlantic-streeters are dreadfully scandalized by the smoke and noise of the locomotive, and are worrying heaven and earth to eject them, tunnel and all. Atlantic-street had its meeting in the Athenæum, last night. Mr. J. D. Cox in the Chair, Mr. E. O. PERRINE, of Tennessee, orator. Long Island—for the whole island is on the defence—meets to-night to belabor the Committee of the Common Council into letting well enough alone.

The summing up in the case of JOSEPH JACKSON, indicted for rape, now on trial in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, Brooklyn, was commenced yesterday morning by Mr. CLINTON, counsel for defence, who occupied the whole day. The District-Attorney will sum up this morning.

Striking for wages is not uncommon. But the laborer seldom strikes so close at home as a German of New-Utrecht attempted to do yesterday morning. The fellow wanted more wages, and because his demand was not instantly complied with he tried to kill his employer. He has been arrested.

The first teller of the Long Island Bank, after 29 years of service in the bank, and all the while deemed an honorable man, has turned out to be an embezzler of the bank's funds. Some $15,000 are missing by his means. Extravagant living is rumored as the cause of this painful lapse.

LUCY STONE, bewildered by the unprecedented success of Mrs. Caudle as a lecturer—LUCY STONE, who married a BLACKWELL, and whose husband "still lives"—lectured last night at the Brooklyn Athenæum to a delighted audience, principally of ladies on "Woman's Rights."

The Nicaragua Question to be Settled on Commercial Principles.

We publish in another column a curious letter on Nicaragua from a correspondent who seems to think that the accuracy of his past predictions should be accepted as sufficient guarantee for the correctness of those which he now advances. To some extent this expectation may be realized, but the writer is evidently prejudiced against the filibustier cause, and we cannot believe without further evidence that Gen. WALKER has allowed himself to be so quietly deposed.

If our correspondent's statements be correct, a grave responsibility devolves on three steamboat Commodores, to whose avarice, ambition and rivalries he assumes to have traced back the fearful tragedy now drawing to its close in Nicaragua; and if what he alleges can be proved, they should be held to a strict account.

Without being told precisely what the future prospects of Central America are, we are congratulated on an arrangement that will restore tranquility and trade. We believe we can throw some light upon this subject, and will endeavor to do so in as few words as possible.

A new transit Company has been organized, and the greater part of the requisite stock has been already subscribed in this City and elsewhere by gentlemen strongly opposed to the filibustier cause, and as strongly in favor of legitimate and peaceful traffic. Without mentioning the names of the copartners of this provisional Company, we may say that all are of the first respectability; and that they have wisely held aloof from granting any influence in the new enterprise to those speculators who have been involved in our past disputes with the Central American Governments. We know that Commodore VANDERBILT eagerly expects from President RIVAS the revocation of a certain decree by which the said Commodore felt aggrieved, but if Mr. VANDERBILT knew the fate of his application, he would endeavor as soon as possible to moderate his expections.

The Government of Costa Rica and Nicaragua must be greatly incensed against CHARLES MORGAN & Co., inasmuch as the said Governments hold written proof that MORGAN furnished arms and military material to the interlopers, while giving it to be understood that he had no connection whatever with WILLIAM WALKER or the filibustier cause. GEORGE LAW seems to be less compromised in the affair—his interference having been simply dictated by a desire to dispose to advantage of certain old muskets and other belligerent lumber lying dead upon his hands.

The stockholders of the new Company are not to be called upon for any deposit until the Central American Governments have ejected the remnant of adventurers now in arms in Nicaragua and restored peace to the whole line of transit. Whether these objects can be effected so rapidly as our correspondent assumes, is different question; the Texans and frontier-men under LOCKRIDGE are soldiers of great tenacity and endurance; but matters have reached such a crisis, that the next steamer may bring us decisive news.

New-York Harbor.

The Harbor Commissioners have submitted to the Legislature, in the Report which we noticed yesterday, the drafts of three acts, which embody such provisions as they deem necessary for the protection of our harbor and for the general promotion of our commercial interests. They are acts of great importance to the whole community, and merit careful attention from all who are connected in any way with the commerce and trade of this great port.

The first provides for the appointment, by the Governor and Senate, of three Commissioners, who, with the Mayors of New-York and Brooklyn, are to have exclusive powers over the Harbor, the boundaries of which are defined, to prevent the transgression of exterior lines in the erection of docks, determine the form and manner of their construction, see that they are kept in good repair, supervise the lading and discharge of vessels, designate proper anchorage-grounds, and enforce such laws as the State may enact for the government of the port of New-York. The offices of Harbor Master and Dock Master, as now existing, are to be abolished, and the Board of Commissioners is to appoint as many persons as may be needed, to assist in the performance of the duties enjoined upon them. The fees now paid to Harbor and Dock Masters are to be retained, and to constitute a fund for meeting the expenses of the Board, the surplus being paid annually into the State Treasury. The advantages of this change are, that it commits to one body duties requiring unity and harmony of action, but which are now divided among several different classes of officers, acting without concert and often in direct hostility to each other, and that it thus receives the prompt and efficient performance of services which are now almost entirely neglected or but half discharged.

The second act prohibits the throwing of rubbish, cinders, or anything else that can obstruct the harbor, into the river,—provides for the more careful usage and protection of the piers, secures them against undue encumbrance, and makes such other regulations for the port as are deemed essential to its proper management.

The third act regulates the rates of wharfage, —requiring the payment of twenty cents a day for every horse employed in lading or discharging vessels,—and establishing specific rates for each article deposited for storage upon the piers. These rates are slightly increased from those now allowed by law.

Besides these specific recommendations the Report of the Commissioners makes a variety of valuable suggestions concerning the growing commerce of the City and the preparations which should be made for its future accommodation. The tendency to increase in the dimensions of vessels,—especially of steamers, with a corresponding increase in their draught of water, leads to some interesting suggestions in regard to the future of our harbor. The depth of water at Sandy Hook bar is twenty-three and one-half feet at low water,—and it is not safe for a vessel drawing 23 feet to go to sea except at half or full tide. Steamships of 2,000 tons draw from 19 to 21 feet;—steamers of 5,000 tons draw 23 to 24 feet; and the English steamer of 10,000 tons, now in process of construction, will draw 28 feet—and cannot therefore enter our port by way of Sandy Hook. The entrance through Hell Gate, however, when properly improved, will accommodate vessels of any size and may be made as safe as that by Sandy Hook. The Commissioners recommend that the State at once undertake the improvement of this channel by blasting the submarine rocks, by the construction of sea walls and a proper beacon, and by the enclosure of the channel at Blackwell's Island. If this channel were thus improved steamers of the largest class may enter Long Island Sound, which is land-locked and well-lighted, and pass the gate with perfect safety in more than 30 feet water.

The Commissioners also recommend the improvement of Harlem River,—so as to permit the passage of vessels from the Hudson to the East River, without going round the City. This would be of very great benefit not only to the inhabitants of the neighborhood, but to the citizens of the adjoining counties, and to the commerce of the Hudson with the Eastern States.

These recommendations of the Commissioners are eminently practical, and merit prompt attention and action on the part of our commercial community. The evils they are designed to remedy are none the less real, because they are not severely felt at the present moment. They concern the future capabilities of our harbor, and the consequent growth and prosperity of our Metropolis.

THE DISTRIBUTION OF OFFICE—NEW-YORK POLITICIANS.—President BUCHANAN seems to be having a rough time among the office-seekers. The New-York appointments are likely to give him the most trouble, though he tries to rid himself of embarrassment as much as possible by throwing the responsibility of making selections upon the Congressional delegation. A Washington correspondent of the Albany Atlas represents it as very important that something should be done to draw off the Democrats who have joined the Republicans. We doubt whether anything practical can be accomplished in this direction by the appointments. Those Democrats are the rank and file of the Barnburners of 1848—the Silas Wright Democracy, who were never especially eager for office, but had a very obstinate and unusual attachment to principle. They have abandoned the Democratic party, because it ceased to have abandoned the Free States and put everything, —office, power, Congress and the Constitution, into the keeping of the Slave power. If Mr. BUCHANAN would get them back, he must take practical measures to convince them of their mistake.

The Manhattan Gas Company.

It is a fact worthy of note that investigations into alleged abuses by Congressional or Corporation Committees rarely come to any practical issue which satisfies the public mind. There is seldom a verdict of not guilty recorded because that would be defiant of public sentiment. Just as rare is it to read a report in which imputations are not slurred over, facts burked and the general conclusions wrapped up in such euphuisms and politeness to both accusers and accused as may imply little more than a benevolent desire to think well of human nature in general. We would not say the accusers are wrong—far from it; we would not say the accused are to blame—decidedly not. They are all honorable men. All parties have been actuated with the best possible intentions towards themselves, each other and all mankind. There has been a little misunderstanding; and the Committee are your only peacemakers. Sometimes a strong-minded Committee bolt off from this placable course, and, having resolved unanimously that these investigations are nasty, troublesome things, determine pour encourager les autres to gibbet the unlucky informer.

So much for Committee reports in general. The particular report under our consideration does not deviate from the lukewarm tenor usual to these literary productions. We cannot charge it with "setting down aught in malice;" on the other hand we can as little say that it nothing extenuates.

The Report premises that "other things being equal the quantity of gas consumed depends upon the amount of pressure," and that "the Company when they lowered their price increased the pressure." This fact might justify a suspicion that the Company endeavored to indemnify themselves for their enforced liberality by driving more gas through the burners than was actually necessary. The Committee however are content with reporting that "they are not able to say that an increase of from 2½ to 3 inches pressure was required; on the other hand they cannot say it was not." This is holding the balance of justice perfectly even.

The fact which we early urged on the Committee in regard to the illuminating power of gas (which ought to have been included under the primary proposition of the report) is well treated. The report tells us that the "illuminating power of an equal quantity of gas made from different kinds of coal ranges from FIVE to FORTY sperm candles." A tolerably wide range for the Company's discretionary powers. Previous to 1853 the Company used two-thirds of Cannel which is double as good as Newcastle. Since 1853 the proportions have been inverted, so that using their discretionary powers, as companies are prone to do, for their own good, the Company since the reduced price have been serving out an inferior article.

Thirdly, the Company has by means of illegal charges in the shape of meter rent and otherwise, been in the habit of grinding out of their customers the little matter of $80,000 per annum; and lastly that the meters are an incorrect standard; for which, however, the Company are not to blame, as they have done the best they could, and design the meters to be accurate. While thus designing these meters to be accurate, they know all the time they are not, and "are the only persons besides the meter manufacturers in this great City who possess the necessary apparatus to test their correctness."

If the Company be not in this matter "damned with faint praise," we do not comprehend the case in which the term will apply.

To remedy the bad quality of the gas, the extortion of the Company, and the uncertainty of the meters, the report recommends that a standard of 16 to 20 sperm candles be fixed and an Inspector of meters appointed. We would suggest as a corollary to the conclusions of the Committee, that there should be a means of enforcing the standard when fixed; that the objectionable charges for meter rents should be declared illegal and peremptorily abolished, and that some speedy remedy for aggrieved consumers should be devised.

PRIVATE SCANDALS.—We have no privileged classes in this country, unfortunately, as they have in England—privileged to have their private affairs publicly discussed—and, consequently, there is a great deficiency in the gossip of our daily papers. In England every person with a title, or a great fortune, is a proper subject for newspaper comment; and, if the Honorable Agemen Fitz Oriel has an intention of leading the Lady Augusta Fitz Boodle to the altar, the affair is immediately put into the papers as a serious piece of news, and when the great event takes place, every incident connected with it is duly published. The names of the bridesmaids, the contents of the trousseau, the dresses worn, the company at the breakfast, the speeches made, and all those little affairs which with us are regarded as sacredly private and personal, are as duly reported by the Jenkinses of the Press as the trial of a criminal, or a debate in Parliament. If Miss BURDETT COUTTS gives a party, the names of every one of her guests are reported, as well as the dresses they wore. With all our inquisitive habits we do nothing of this kind; and our daily papers lose considerable interest in consequence. It is only on very extraordinary occasions that the private rights of the people are invaded by the press. An extreme delicacy is the rule in respect to all personal matters. But, when an affair becomes public by means of an appeal to our courts then all restrictions are considered at an end, and the utmost latitude is given to the reporter. Some of our cotemporaries have alluded to the recent escapade of a young lady in Fifth-avenue, who married her father's coachman, as having been improperly dragged before the public, but the case was one that legitimately belonged to the Press. One of the parties had appealed to the law and it became at once a subject of public interest. Our papers cannot be justly accused of gossiping about private affairs; but they make up now and then for the restrictions imposed upon them by making the show of a private scandal when it comes legitimately before the public, as in the above case in question. It is an inherent evil, it is true, and every one sympathizes with a family whose private misfortunes become a topic of public discussion; but then it is a misfortune for which the Press is not in any wise to be held responsible.

EXAMINING CANDIDATES FOR THE PUBLIC SERVICE.—It is one of the anomalies of our Government that while candidates for admission to the Army and Navy are obliged to submit to the most rigorous examination as to their physical and mental qualifications, applicants for situations in the civil and diplomatic service undergo no examination whatever, except as to their political antecedents. Men are appointed to important clerkships without any evidence being given that they can even read and write. It is always taken for granted that a man is qualified for any position he has the modesty to ask for. This way of doing things must necessarily lead to much confusion and inconvenience to the public; a good many incompetent persons, and not a few "feeble folk" are saddled upon the Government, who cannot be got rid of once they get a foot in a public office; and many a The Barnacle becomes a fixture upon the Treasury, who not only renders no service for his pay, but acts as a clog upon the public business.

They manage these things better in England just now. They have adopted the system of examining all candidates for the civil service as well as for the church, the army and the navy, and the Commissioners appointed for this purpose have recently published their second report, from which it appears that the "Object of the examination is—1. To test the candidate's actual fitness for his duties; and, 2. to test his education and intelligence generally. The number of candidates upon whose cases the commissioners adjudicated from the 31st of May, 1855, to the 31st of December, 1856, was 3,004. Of these 69 were extra-mission, 12 physically incompetent, 19 devoid of satisfactory evidence as to character, 39 admitted without examination (on reports from heads of departments,) and 127 either declined to undergo the examination or withdrew without completing it. Of the remaining 2,688 actually examined, 1,587 passed, and obtained certificates of qualification, 880 were rejected, and 219 were unsuccessful upon competition. Thus the rejections were in the ratio of 35.7 per cent. on those actually examined (not counting the unsuccessful competitors.)"

A similar examination would show some very curious facts in relation to the qualifications of Washington office-hunters. As Mr. BUCHANAN is likely to have a troublesome time of it in disposing of his offices, he might lessen his difficulties greatly by appointing a Board of Examiners similar to the English one.

Wallack's Theatre.

Two or three years since, the consumers of poetic literature were startled by the appearance of a timid little book called Passion Flowers. The little page was a void—guiltless of a name—but the opening poem revealed the fact that it was an authoress who addressed the reader. There was a large-eyed earnestness about it, a mild, sacrificial tone, which none but the last and best gift think it necessary to indulge. For the rest, there was the usual quantity of enthusiasm about Rome, and Italy and Italian skies and pictures; the usual faint murmurings of the heart on a variety of subjects; the usual quantity of unprovoked Greek, and much more than the usual amount of talent in all. The book was, perhaps, more remarkable for the absence of a "Life Story"—the epidemic of the day—than anything else. It was a quiet, unobtrusive, able little book, full of womanly wit and sentiment, and calculated in an eminent degree to place the authoress in a favorable position with the public. If it did not contain the heaven-smiling melody of the lark, it was free from the house-top chittering of the sparrow. In a deluge of poets it selected a quiet little channel for itself, and did not rage and fret destructively in pursuing it.

Mrs. HOWE, the authoress, made her second appearance in public last night. She has been fortunate in her publishers each time. On the first occasion TICKNOR, REED & FIELDS; on the second Mr. STUART, of Wallack's Theatre. A person of taste could scarcely desire more. Mrs. HOWE's play is called "The World's Own;" there is another name ("Leonore") which we omit, because it is old and hackneyed and unworthy a source which is fresh and pure. The name does not strike us as felicitous, for we are not aware that Count Lothair has been claimed by the world, or any part of it except that ruled by the acquisition of the authoress.

The plot is Italian. A traveling Count falls in love with a beautiful village maiden, Leonore—deceives her, and goes on his way. Unconscious of man's duplicity, she follows, meets him, finds that he is married, and has a child. These are the elements of the first three acts. The remainder of the story is of revenge. Leonore plunges from her high condition of injured innocence, to one of guilty revenge. She becomes the mistress, the rival, of the Prince; plots the Count's destruction; succeeds. In the last act the Count is condemned to die the death of a traitor; his child has been stolen, his wife lays senseless beneath a weight of woe and obloquy. Everything is ripe for a most gluttonous surfeit of revenge. But Remorse, in the shape of an early lover, steps in, points out to Leonore the hideousness of her acts, and so overwhelms her that she releases the fiery passions of her bosom with the sharp point of a poniard, and dies. Previous to dissolution she forgives the Count, and thus disturbs the poetic balance of the play.

We do not know if this play was written expressly for Miss HEZNOR, but we suppose that such is the fact, for, that portion of it in which she appears most prominently is certainly adapted to her powers with considerable ability. The authoress appears to have had the power of all her thoughts before her,—the passionate personality on whom might depend the most fervent and romantic utterances of love. Those who are most familiar with Miss HEZNOR's acting know how thoroughly she can surrender herself to such emotions. She interprets—even in common-place dramas—a depth of affection which poets not always reach.

In the opening acts of this play she is less a human being than a poetic abstraction, yet in spite of some exaggerations which will be toned down, she draws us so closely to her that we feel and sympathize with her exaltation. When the sudden revulsion comes in the third actif there are moments of overwhelming power, but we feel more for ourselves than for the heroine, for from this point she becomes weak; no longer trusts to the strong impulses of a warm and generous innocence, but hacks out a course with the dry and repulsive brain of a pettifogging demon. The abduction of the Count's child; the conspiracy to involve the Count in a treasonable design against the Prince's life, do not obtain our sympathy, because they are small, tedious, incomplete. Such devices are good for the villains of a piece—who are sure to be confounded—but not for the heroines, who must be rewarded or martyred. To begin with passion and end with calculation is a mistake fatal to dramatic success. We fear that Mrs. HOWE has fallen into the error, either from unconsciousness of her own rights, or from timidity to use them with force. There are internal indications in the play which induce us to believe that she is incapable of the fiercer developments of passion. In the last scene where Leonore has accomplished all that she has aimed for, and merely awaits the consummation of a dire revenge, she uses prettinesses of language, and talks of sleep as though nothing of unusual import had occurred. In such a condition the mind does not dwell on trifles, but floats on an anticipation which may be days removed, but is present to the never drowsy senses. It is but right to say that Miss HEZNOR intensified these passages and gave them a meaning which their language scarcely conveyed, and indeed this was the case generally in the fourth and fifth acts. In spite of this we think that they are failures, although interesting from the introduction of much action which the earlier part lacks. They are beneath the exalted passion of the earlier portion of the work.

Leonore's death is heroic, and presented to us with excellent reasons as it is—natural. But although Leonore struggles with adversity she is not an heroic person, and her death, therefore, is rather a necessity of them than a [illegible] of the play would [illegible] of every one [illegible] to the [illegible] bringing down by a [illegible] hand, but it does not [illegible] the probability of any [illegible] it destroys the poetic justice of the [illegible] Intensely in the injured person, all [illegible] to do so with the letter that the [illegible]

The play does not move quickly. It lacks the [illegible] wheels on which such works should progress, [illegible] ing instead the quiet interest which should [illegible] reader. The language is fluent and graceful; the [illegible] agery fresh and beautiful, but the play as a play is slow, and bites the patience. The earlier portion is richest in literary merit, but the final scenes possess most dramatic interest, and the success of the piece hinged on them. Mrs. HOWE has produced a play which will sustain her reputation as an authoress, but which has not, we think, laid the foundation of a dramatic literature. Some of the language requires toning down to prose; blank verse sounds stilted in the mouths of peasants and domestics; many descriptions, too, may be omitted with decided advantage. On the other hand, there are passages which might be enumerated with advantage. Mrs. HOWE paints with a delicate pencil;—a great breath is the tool that is wanted for the stage. In spite of these drawbacks, and some preliminary stumbling of nervousness, the piece was a success.

Mr. SCHAMPE, as Lothair, was good. Mr. WALLACK, as Ilderim—an unfortunate portrayer, who gets killed without the slightest occasion—[illegible] and conventional to a degree. Mr. DREWE, as [illegible] imperfect in the text, and hard in its interpretation. Mrs. ASHTON, as the Countess, looked the character to advantage, and was good, except in the last scene. The other members of the company were unexceptionable, and nothing more.

Previous to the play, a new overture, by Mr. W. H. FRY, was performed. It is a cleverly constructed, and entirely appropriate introduction. Two distinct themes mark the opposing elements of the drama, and are elaborated with much concerted grandeur.

Miss HEZNOR was called before the curtain at the end of the play; was followed by Mr. LAMBERT, and then by Mr. STUART. The gentlemen addressed the audience—Mr. STUART especially availing himself of the opportunity of saying many pleasant things about his company and the public.

The scenery and costumes are admirable.

The Chevalier WIKOFF is in Washington, and the Evening Star says of him:

"The Chevalier, the very picture of [illegible] manners and free nature to indue of [illegible] among the distinguished strangers now in Washington. Really, on seeing him we fancied our eyes were playing us false. Instead of being the [illegible] dit-looking fellow, with an eye like a hawk, [illegible] moment and like Shylock's at another, as [illegible] apt to picture him, he appears as though [illegible] was his besetting sin above all others, [illegible] and air is as quiet and modest a gentleman [illegible] would expect to meet in a country clergyman."

Rev. Dr. BROWN, who [illegible] months engaged in the preparation of a [illegible] ecclesiastical History, reports important progress in his work. This history will be looked for with [illegible] by the Baptist denomination.

Judge Russell's Residence.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

You are in error in stating that the [illegible] which Judge RUSSELL sentenced young [illegible] State Prison for life, was robbing VALLELY of [illegible] cents. There was not the slightest proof that [illegible] robbed him of a penny,—nor was he so [illegible] HYDE proved guilty of any offence at all.

VALLELY had been out for a point to [illegible] child, at about 9 o'clock in the morning, and stopped at a porter house to drink, where he met three [illegible] young men. He treated them to beer, and drank largely himself. On going home he asked them to go with him, which they did. VALLELY was afterwards found in the snow drunk, and could give no account of himself. The boys had left him;—and on this state of facts it was assumed that they were guilty of highway robbery—though VALLELY had not lost a cent, and they were convicted and sentenced accordingly.

They were convicted by the public [illegible] gazetteers,—and were sentenced by a [illegible] paper puff. That is the whole story.

The New Creek Coal Company.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The New Creek Company has never failed to meet the engagements promptly. It has never [illegible] a stitch. Stock as authorized by its Charter. The statement quoted from the [illegible] that the New Creek Company had purchased a valuable property at Baltimore, and was proceeding vigorously with its [illegible], was literally true. The New Creek Company did make a large purchase in Baltimore, and [illegible] new wharf for its accommodation in the shipment of coal. The whole cost was $[illegible], every dollar of which has been paid in cash. A [illegible] of the property has since been sold, and in [illegible] months from the time we fairly commenced [illegible] than the Committee asked $1,000 [illegible].

The report made on the 24 inst. will show the present condition of the Company. The Company owns in addition 10,000 acres of land with an inexhaustible supply of coal and iron ore. A furnace will soon be in operation on their lands, the necessary funds having been raised. The office of the Company was moved to Baltimore [illegible] ago. When it was in New-York I was [illegible] of the Company, and feel that you have done me injustice in classing the New Creek Company with a number of fraudulent concerns. At this time my [illegible] is held by many of the first citizens of Baltimore.

Very Respectfully Yours, ALFRED ARNOLD,

Trinity Church.

MINERVERNE, Schoharie Co., N. Y.,
Thursday, March 5, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

As one of many clergymen, through whom Trinity Church of your City has made grants of money to aid in the erection of churches and in the promotion of other benevolent enterprises, I feel called upon at this present crisis in her history, distinctly to state that she never sought in the remotest manner to influence my church views, nor required of me to vote in Convention in accordance with her wishes, as a grant or condition on which she would make a grant of money.

I never have known of an instance of her making any such condition in the case of any other parties to whom she has made grants of money.

As it has been intimatingly, but I believe falsely, charged upon Trinity Church that she has used her patronage for partisan purposes, I feel it to be my duty to add my testimony against such charges.

Respectfully yours, G. W. FORTER.

Scientific Association.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I was glad to see your notice of the preparations in progress at Montreal for the next meeting there of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Our friends there will do the right thing; and coming as the meeting does just at the right season, it will probably be one of great interest.

I think you are mistaken in supposing that a new President for that meeting will have to be chosen, on account of the lamented death of Prof. BAILEY. The duty will, without question, devolve upon the Vice-President, Prof. CONWELL, of Providence.

Vermont and Senator Sumner.

The Legislature of Vermont, at its recent session, adopted a series of both resolutions highly complimentary and condemnatory touching Senator Sumner's last speech in the Senate. On receiving a copy Mr. Sumner wrote the following reply:

New-York, Saturday, March 7, 1857.

To His Excellency, Hiram Fletcher, Governor of Vermont:

Sir: At the last moment before leaving the Senate family, in quest of that vigorous health which my country has months had been taken from me, I have received notice of the resolutions adopted by the Legislature of Vermont, and approved by your Excellency, which, with intelligent caution of a sister State, will be ever cherished by me as a gift [illegible] of the Legislature, such a token is precious to me in every respect; not only because it assured me of personal sympathy of the people of Vermont, spoken through their representatives, but because it elevates their interest in that cause which is more important than any person.

But I cannot accept this public approval of my humble efforts without taking the occasion to express my gratitude for that I was permitted to make it, and also my humble determination, with returning strength, to something which shall still further unmask the pretentious Barbarism which has fastened upon our Republic, and installed itself in all the high places of power.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

With much respect, your faithful servant,

CHARLES SUMNER.

A Sad Story—Extraordinary Treatment of a Young Girl by her Family.

From the Newark Daily Advertiser.

ELIZABETH, Monday, March 13, 1857.

SIR: In answer to a letter of Isa C. WHITEHEAD, Esq., inquiring into the facts of the prevailing and long-continued excitement in this town, his correspondent, Dr. MURRAY, replies in your issue of Saturday: "I am not the person to give you the most direct and full and accurate information, as I have made no personal investigation into the facts, and as all the persons primarily interested are unconnected with my subpœnas; yet in spite of his profession of disclaimer, the Reverend Doctor goes on to give an opinion, or estimate, upon the merits, and a statement of the facts.

I have carefully avoided connection, heretofore, with any newspaper controversy, as this painful subject, although it is intimately with the unfortunate victim, and by reason of a careful personal investigation of the facts, from the beginning to the end, I have necessarily, and of right, felt the warmest interest in, and attained very full knowledge of, the case.

The correspondence of Mr. WHITEHEAD and Dr. MURRAY, as prepared for your paper, gives an impression to the public so different from the actual truth, that I have unwillingly felt constrained to detail at some length the facts, exciting and justifying the extreme sympathy for the unhappy girl, universally felt, and plainly outspoken, by the citizens of Elizabeth.

The young lady in question is a girl of twenty, dearly loved and highly esteemed by a large circle of friends and relatives, for great warmth of heart, amiability of disposition, purity and dignity of character, and mental balance and vigor. Unfortunate in her home, she had to seek elsewhere the affection and sympathy she craved. Some two years ago she returned to that home, received by serious and long-continued illness, contracted in a neighboring boarding-school. The hands that should have ministered to her were withheld. Needing every solace of affection, she was peremptorily ordered to return to the care of strangers. Upon her refusal, an attempt was made to obtain from one of the most respectable physicians of the town, who had attended her from infancy, an opinion that she was insane, for the purpose of confining her in an asylum. He scouted the idea of insanity, took the poor girl to his own home, and in a fortnight, by simple treatment and kindly sympathy, restored her health and spirits. She was then invited by a distant connection to spend the Winter in a Southern city, and was allowed to go. Could those who [illegible] have really supposed her insane? They must have universally admired and commended, and she returned to this town in the Spring, full of health and buoyant hope. During the lapse of the succeeding Winter she was subject to a harsh trial. Depressed in spirits, she unavailingly sought sympathy and comfort, where she had a right to find them.

Suddenly, without the least, that or notice, the unhappy girl was conveyed to New-York and subjected to examinations by two physicians, of an hour each; their minds were biased by statements of other persons. The girl was a stranger to them, and yet, upon this hasty investigation, they pronounced an opinion of mental disorder. Neither of these gentlemen had made insanity his specialty. A third physician was consulted, who had special skill in that malady, but he did not see the girl, and gave an opinion upon the representations of others, and they not doctors. Of the three, he who examined the case more particularly has since stated that, although without special skill in that particular branch of practice, he could have treated whatever disorder he believed to exist in the young lady, with perfect success, outside the walls of an asylum, and he further stated that he should prefer her treatment under the cheerful and sympathetic influences of a kindly family.

She was taken at once, against her will (if reliance can be placed upon the statements of some justifying that course) to the distant asylum at Hartford, where she was imprisoned for a week or more before it was generally known in the town. Had the Reverend Doctor himself been suddenly spirited off, and thus confined, the surprise could not have been greater. Up to the moment the girl was taken away she had been in constant and familiar intercourse with the families of the most intelligent and respectable citizens of the town. The family physician had almost filled the place of her deceased father, and knew her as his own daughter. One of her most intimate friends was the wife of a younger physician, in full practice, who had seen her constantly and freely. Neither of them, nor her quiet-aged companions, nor their more experienced mothers, had ever detected in her the least taint of the alleged mental malady. The whole town was in an uproar. The convictions of her sanity were and still is firm in every mind. Humanity had been outraged, and men, women and children were grieved, indignant, and fresh in denunciation. Even the Reverend Doctor did not escape the shadow influence of sympathy.

The nearest relative who had survived the idolized honored father, herself nearly crazed with grief, the family physician and myself, at once left for Hartford. Our apprehension was that a fortnight's confinement had induced the disorder, unduly sought to be fastened on the victim, when first imprisoned. The unwilling testimony of Dr. BUTLER, the physician in charge of the asylum, as hereafter detailed, shortly dispelled this fear. He refused to either of us a sight of his patient, and when questioned about the case, said he had not formed a conclusive opinion, that he required further time and observation. Suspicion commenced on the hasty conclusion of the New-York physicians! Upon being strongly pressed, he alleged that he believed her mind to be disordered, and then sought to evade further answer. He was brought back to the subject, and in reply to a searching question, said her mind was perverted. He then changed the conversation, but being required to give the symptoms in the patient, on which he based this opinion of disorder and prostration, he stated that on the previous day, in repeating to him a story, she had become confused. Here, after two weeks' trial of the happiest circumstances, to develop or to create insanity, was this one bald fact to sustain the insane hypothesis of this learned Doctor!

In conversation, he admitted distinctly and unequivocally, that if his own daughter were affected, as he believed this young lady to be, he should treat her in his own family, and should not send her to the asylum. The young lady had, according to his own account, complained to him of being confined with insane people; had asked if she were considered insane, and how long she was to be kept there? The asylum contains upwards of two hundred lunatics; and this poor girl, whose touch it had been almost to live in the room with [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The road is completed and in operation the entire line, is 77½ miles long, commencing at the City of Indianapolis, the Capital of the State of Indiana, and terminating at the Ohio State line, near Richmond, Indiana, connecting with the Dayton and Western Railway.
This road is of great importance; is in excellent order, and doing a large and profitable business. The Company also guarantee the Dayton and Western road, 16 miles—the whole line, 109 miles long. The earnings of the two lines for 1854, were $321,400; for 1855, $350,160, and for 1856, $434,004; each year showing a large increase over the preceding one, and the last year, $112,804 over that of 1854; and the month of January, 1857, shows an increase of $9,908 over the same month in 1856.

WEEKLY PAPERS' INTELLIGENCE.

[illegible] appointments made in other directions, whether the appointees enter upon their duties now or hereafter; in other words, to designate the fortunate and dismiss the disappointed. The President would gladly relieve himself of the responsibility by devolving it upon the Congressional delegations, but in New-York, Pennsylvania and New-England they are so divided in preference as to increase the difficulties to relieve the existing perplexities. It is felt by the Administration that the true course is to bring the business of patronage to a conclusion, that public concerns may receive their proper attention; and to do it effectually, it must be done promptly. Mr. Cobb advises this policy earnestly, and he is the active, if not the master mind, of the Cabinet. That is to say, he has more directing force than any of his colleagues, and more of the special confidence of the President than them all together.

It is quite amusing to see the airs which the little office posts on here, affecting all manners of White-House intimacy, and announcing in mongrel English dialect ideas which a diseased imagination conjures up. A word or two will suffice to dispose of these shallow pretensions. A brother of the renowned author in case of the patriotic applicants for the Marshalship of this District. When his name was submitted to the President, he failed to recognize the distinction, so tartly inquired, "Not that fellow in the Star?" It is thus that oracular gentry are let down a peg occasionally for public edification.

Mr. Greenleaf, of Maine, has again turned up. He did not have during the inauguration era, but did not care a. Feeling himself to deserve well of the Republican, having served in some of the best places and being ready to support the Constitution for a few thousands a year, he is not willing to see the Boston Custom-House drifting among second-rate applicants, when as Ex-Attorney General one such it simply as a question office for disabled politicians. The President has overruled by the chivalry, under the head of the gallant Toombs, in discarding the aforesaid Greenleaf from the Cabinet seat, and he may take it into his head, when the Georgia senator is engaged in calling the roll of his slaves, to issue a commission styly, by way of compensation.

Isaac Rhomson has come upon us, brimful of affidavits, admonition and address. Of course, he got here by accident, just when the New-York appointments were about to be canvassed. It was to him and Mr. Langlow, of Rhode Island, that the President first declared the policy of rotation, which has so disturbed the composure of official circles, and given incumbents, sprightly by nature, an awful look of the [illegible]. He desires to see that policy carried out to the letter, and demands the penalty of the bond—[illegible] the decade than the blood, however. With all his art and ability, he has not been able to bring the new members to an agreement. Every mother's son of them has his own candidate for every office, and neither will yield to the other. They will not even flip coppers, except upon one condition—heads I win, tails you lose. There are other Richmonds in the field besides Isaac, who claim equal honor and consideration. Indeed, they are all honorable men, and look like such, in their best Bashe's and black [illegible]. Mr. Augustus Schell is the favorite of a faction, but the very name is odorous of all those domestic quiddities which have given birth to Hard-Shells, Soft Shells, Half Shells, and No Shells. Could not the Legislature just [illegible] some other title, so as to avoid [illegible] shells. A multitude of aspirants [illegible] before the disturbed [illegible] of the President, when any number of them [illegible]. With a Jackson [illegible] Buchanan affirmed—he does not [illegible] before people, as his great exemplar did—that he would have no Hards and Softs in Pennsylvania. This repugnance does not help to commend any patriot who by name or affinity rejoices in such a [illegible].

Lord Napier will have his first official interview with the Secretary of State to-morrow, and the action of the Senate upon the Dallas Treaty must necessarily be broached. It will then be ascertained whether the British Minister came provided with authority to meet the contingency which has happened, and to conclude the negotiations here which are now necessary to complete the arrangement between the two Governments. No apprehension is entertained that serious objection will be interposed by the British Government, for the desire on that side is quite as anxious as on ours, and perhaps more so, to remove this cause of irritation from diplomatic controversy. Besides, it was apparent from the vote on the ratification, only two votes than the constitutional requirement, with some of the opponents of the treaty absent, that if returned it might be subjected to a severer ordeal, and probably be defeated altogether. It was saved by a narrow chance anyhow—and if Mr. Hunter, Mr. Mason, Mr. Davis and Mr. Bell, and such men, had not come to the rescue, and some of them in a generous spirit for which the South was not altogether prepared, it would have signally failed. At the outset the prospect was gloomy, and it was only as an expedient to prevent the appearance of a rejection that the Committee on Foreign Relations brought in their new treaty substituting as the basis of new negotiations, and not in the shape of amendments, as has been generally stated. They considered the treaty dead, and in order to prevent a misconstruction in England the mode suggested was proposed. Then, for the first time, the Senate appeared to realize the importance of their action, and then men of opposing opinions set to in earnest to reconcile the apparent differences, and concluded the work in a few hours.

OBSERVER.

NEW-YORK LEGISLATURE.

SENATE....ALBANY, Monday, March 16.

Petitions were presented against the Port Warden's bill, and for the repeal of the law of 1814 regulating Trinity Church.

The Railroad Committee reported favorably the bill to amend the charter of the Long Island Railroad Company.

Mr. Bockaewout introduced a bill authorizing the payment of clerks and examiners employed by the Railroad Commissioner.

Bills were passed to allow a change in the vote of the Second-avenue Railroad; to amend the Insurance law of 1849; for the appointment of a Commissioner to prepare a civil code; for the improvement of the Oswego harbor; and to incorporate the New-York Pure Milk Company.

EVENING SESSION.

Mr. Nichols offered concurrent resolutions expressing the conviction that the present laws are inadequate to prevent bribery and corruption in elections; that necessity exists for the enactment of such laws as will effectually put a stop to these demoralizing influences, and resolving that the Constitution be so altered as to provide that laws may be enacted excluding from the right of suffrage persons convicted of bribery and corruption, and all such other laws as may be deemed necessary to protect the purity of the elective franchise. Laid over.

Mr. Barnes called up the resolution authorizing the Commissioners of the Land Office to receive proposals for the sale of the Boys' Academy, or any other property in the City of Albany, for a site for the Governor's mansion. Laid over.

Mr. Bradford offered concurrent resolutions, instructing the State Engineers to make a full survey of the estimate for the extension of the Chenango Canal to the State line of Pennsylvania, so as to open a channel for the transportation of coal to this State. Laid over.

Mr. Barnes offered concurrent resolutions authorizing the Commander-in-Chief of the Military of the State to appoint a Board of five Commissioners, to consist of practical and experienced officers, whose duty it shall be to report to him as early as possible a plan for the better discipline, organization and classification of the State Militia, and authorizing the Governor if he approve to carry the same into effect in general orders; all officers to be rendered supernumerary by such reorganization, and to enjoy commission privileges the same as now, provided that no regiment or company shall be retained who will not adopt the uniform dress of the State as prescribed by the Commander-in-Chief within six months of the specified day. Laid over.

The special order being the Prohibition and Temperance bill, the debate upon it was resumed.

Mr. Rockwell, who has hitherto been in favor of prohibition, declared himself now in favor of Mr. Brown's Statute bill, having become convinced that an excise law would be more effective than a prohibitory law.

Messrs. Towns and Lee spoke in favor of prohibition.

ASSEMBLY....ALBANY, Monday, March 16.

The attendance was very thin.

Mr. Jesse J. Bunker rose to a [illegible] a morning paper, he said, had [illegible] introduced by him on Saturday, [illegible] corruption of the Republican members [illegible] place the State, had been suggested by Mr. John [illegible], who was that day in the Assembly Chamber. He declared that the statement was false, and [illegible] it was an outrage upon a gentleman [illegible] honorable to interfere with the action of members on their floor.

PROCLAMATION CONCERNING.

From the Common Council, against any law creating Police Commissioners.

Communications were sent in by the Metropolitan and American Exchange Banks, in reply to the resolutions of inquiry, stating that the information sought would be furnished at the earliest possible moment, and asking the appointment of a Committee to investigate all the matters connected with these institutions, and examine all the officers under both the Banks. They ask this as matter of justice, since the resolutions imply the existence of some evil which it is desirable to remove.

The Committee reported a bill appropriating $95,000 for the immediate improvement of the navigation of the Hudson River, appointing Thomas Schuyler and Alfred Van Santvoord, of Albany, and Gardner Grant, of Troy, as Commissioners to expend the money, and directing the work to be advertised in Albany and Troy, and let to the lowest bidder.

A report and bill was presented for the abolishment of the Death Penalty.

Mr. Fuller dissented from the report.

Mr. Fuller introduced a resolution to amend the act to open and improve Division-avenue, Brooklyn.

The bill to provide against the creation of unsafe buildings in New-York, and to amend the Charter of the Inebriate Asylum, were passed.

EVENING SESSION.

BILLS PASSED.

To authorize the District Attorney of Kings County to appoint a Clerk.

Designating the Corporation newspapers of Brooklyn.

To set off the slips from Pier No. 1 to 16, East River, for the use of Canal-boats during the season of navigation.

On motion of Mr. J. J. Reilly, the bill exempting property from assessment to the amount of $500 was made the special order for Friday.

The Funeral of Samuel Zimmerman.

BUFFALO, Monday, March 16.

The funeral of Mr. Samuel Zimmerman, killed by the recent terrible disaster on the Great Western Railroad, took place this afternoon at Niagara Falls, Canada. The Masonic display probably was the largest as well as the most imposing ever witnessed in this country. Large delegations of Knight Templars and Royal Arch and Master Masons were present in full regalia from Western New-York and from Upper and Lower Canada. Many of the members of Parliament and a great number of the most prominent men of Canada attended the funeral. It is estimated that not less than 15,000 persons took part in the demonstration.

Emigration to Kansas.

ST. LOUIS, Monday, March 16.

In consequence of greatly-increased travel Westward, two extra passenger trains were put on the Pacific Railroad to-day, to connect at Jefferson with the Lightning Line of steamers for Kansas. The emigration to Kansas thus far this season equals anything known in the country before.

Gov. Geary and his Secretary, Dr. Guton, arrived here yesterday, en route for the East.

Forgery Cases.

BUFFALO, Monday, March 16.

F. A. McKnight, of this city, was arrested this evening, on a charge of forgery. Some $12,000 of the forged paper has come to light.

BANGOR, Monday, March 16.

Daniel Emery was arrested here to-day. He had obtained $650 from the Eastern Bank on a forged check, and was subsequently recognized in the street and taken into custody.

Public Reception to Gen. Cushing in Newburyport.

BOSTON, Monday, March 16.

A public reception is to be given to General Cushing by the citizens of Newburyport on his arrival home from Washington.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Poisonous Veal.

Veal—the veal of calves scarcely dry—calves not three days old, may be expected about these days. It is exceedingly unwholesome, and to sell it is a violation of our ordinance. But these reasons are insufficient to keep it out of market. Buyers must look out for themselves.

Sudden Death in a Stallion House.

On Sunday night a lighterman, named John Hanlon, was almost instantly killed at the Third District Station-house. He had been arrested for intoxication, and while the Officer was in the act of conducting him down a stone stairway leading to the cells, he fell and struck his head against one of the steps, producing, it is supposed, congestion of the brain.

Fires.

IN WILLIAM-STREET.

At 10½ o'clock this morning a fire broke out in the liquor store and boarding-house of James Stone. It originated under the bar counter. Damage about $250; insured for $1,200 on stock and household furniture in the Bowery Insurance Company.

IN ANN-STREET.

A fire broke out in the German boarding-house and lagerbier saloon of Henry Sieper, No. 76 Ann-street. It is supposed to have originated from an ash-barrel beneath the kitchen stairs. Loss about $150; insured for $700 in the Astor Fire Insurance Company.

WHO SAYS SO?

Who says that Iodine—that powerful remedial agent in all cases of consumption, scrofula, &c.—can be dissolved in pure water, so as to administer it without potassium, without mercury, without alcohol?

Dr. Henry R. Chilton says so, the eminent chemist, in his certificate of the analysis of Andrews' Liquid Iodine, or Pure Iodine Water.

Who denies it? Nobody but quacks that will not believe what they see; old fogies in medicine, who, rather than admit a new truth, would sacrifice human life.

Who knows that Andrews' Liquid Iodine will cure consumption, scrofula, palsy, rheumatism, and affections of the heart and liver?

Hundreds who have been cured by its use within two years; they are here in the City, and are ready to testify. Sold at $1 a bottle by Andrews & Fosdick, No. 3 Second-avenue, and No. 882 Broadway; C. H. Ring, No. 192 Broadway; Mrs. Hayes, Brooklyn, and all druggists.

From the New-York Dispatch.

Hallotypes.—The specimens we have seen of this new and delightful art exceed in beauty of portraiture those of any of the other popular styles. The effect of this process is a singular blending of sharp outline, brilliant coloring and the most exquisite softness of tone imaginable, excelling the touch and finish of the rarest miniatures wrought by the master-artists on the meet ivory. At Gurney's Gallery, No. 349 Broadway, an extensive collection of these beautiful specimens of art can at all times be seen free of cost. The rooms are fitted up for the reception of visitors, the utmost civility being shown to all. These beautiful portraits, in fact must be seen at leisure to be fully appreciated, and no one possessing any taste or love of the beautiful will ever go away from the gallery of them without determining to possess the semblance of some dear friend taken by this pleasing process. Artists thronge the gallery and speak of the wonders of this new discovery as possessing merits above all the other styles of portraiture now in vogue.

Diaphanotypes, Colored in Oil.—An entirely new and exquisitely beautiful style of picture introduced and made only at the Root Gallery, No. 363 Broadway, corner of Franklin-street. In these pictures all the effect of color, light and shade, &c., of the most elaborately finished oil-painting is obtained, while the individuality of the likeness, with all its delicacy and beauty of detail, is entirely preserved. Although but recently brought to their present state of perfection, these pictures have met with universal commendation. Artists and connoisseurs pronounce them the most perfect pictures yet produced by the photographic art. The public are invited to call at the gallery and examine specimens on exhibition.

LONG ISLAND.

Another Attempt to Murder in New-Utrecht.

A German named Jacob Asslinger, employed by Mr. Aaron Smith, on Franklin-avenue, near New-Utrecht village, was arrested yesterday by Constable John Fredrix, on a charge of attempting to kill Mr. Smith, his employer. Asslinger, it appears, had demanded an increase of wages, which had been promised as soon as the season opened so that he could work on the farm. This he was not satisfied with, and yesterday morning early he entered the bedroom of Mr. Smith, whom he seized by the throat with one hand, and with a knife in the other attempted to stab him. Mr. Smith fortunately was awake when the man entered, and succeeded in warding off the blows and escaping from the room, without receiving any serious injury. Asslinger then escaped from the premises, and was yesterday afternoon arrested in Greenwood Cemetery, where he had concealed himself. He will be examined in New-Utrecht, before Justice Schoonmaker, to-day.

Row at a Church.

There was quite an excitement at the Roman Catholic Church, on Sydney-place, on Sunday last. A young man was arrested for bad conduct, whereupon his friends jumped in, and a fine fight was spoiled by the interference of the Third District Police. Three of the young belligerents were arrested and taken before Justice Black yesterday morning, but as no complainant appeared they were discharged.

BROOKLYN CITY COURT.

In this Court yesterday the day calendar was called, and no cases being ready, a few motions were heard, when the Court adjourned.

MONDAY, March 16—P. M.

The Official Averages of the Banks in the City of New-York for the week ending Saturday last, March 14, the particulars of which are advertised by each Bank separately on another page of this paper, present in the aggregate the following changes from the previous statement of Saturday, March 7:

Increase of Loans	$1,350,340
Decrease in Specie	692,608
Increase of Undrawn Deposits	1,819,583
Decrease in Circulation	13,156

Including the Clearing-House operations of the week, and the Sub-Treasury statement of Saturday, the following is the general

COMPARATIVE EXHIBITATION.

	March 14, 1857.	March 14, 1856.	March 1, 1857.
Capital	$49,462,000	$50,262,000	$50,262,000
Loans	104,578,926	112,250,929	111,898,649
Specie	14,045,024	11,077,739	11,707,846
Circulation	7,868,148	8,458,641	8,465,697
Gold Deposits	86,631,178	94,251,267	95,858,923
Exchanged	21,600,717	27,538,748	30,982,230
Undrawn	27,090,439	26,714,525	24,894,942
Sub-Treasury	12,933,769	15,503,313	15,139,806
1856—March 15, Specie in Bank			$14,045,024
In Sub-Treasury			12,933,769
Total Reserve in City			$26,978,793
1857—March 7, Specie in Bank			$11,077,739
In Sub-Treasury			15,503,313
Total Reserve in City			$26,640,045

The substantial increase in the line of Deposits enabled the Banks to extend their line of Discounts, notwithstanding the moderate falling off in Coin. The reserve of Specie turns out much the same as the movements of the week, reported this morning, indicated. The Gold exchanges with the interior do not vary materially.

The California packet delivered to-day $1,004,000 in Gold, and $120,000 Specie drafts on the Sub-Treasury. It will be noticed, from the financial extracts we make from the San Francisco press, that while the business of mining in the interior is on the increase, the obstructions to intercourse with the city, by reason of the heavy rains and almost impassable roads, have lessened the immediate receipts of Gold Dust. The markets show some improvement, and the prospects of the farmers as well as the mining classes throughout the State are well reported upon.

The precipitate fall in New-York and Erie Stock on Saturday afternoon prepared the general market for a blue Monday, and the signs of a small panic were pretty rife on the opening of the Stock Exchange this morning. The additional decline in Erie was 2 ⅌ cent., while the depreciation all round on the share list was equal to 1@1½ ⅌ cent. The cause for all this was loudly inquired for after the adjournment of the session, but no very satisfactory answer given beyond the fact that, for the moment, the Bears appear to rule the Street, irrespective of Foreign or Domestic news or the condition and progress of the Money Market at this point, and the railway traffic throughout the country. In the afternoon there was a recovery of ½@¾ ⅌ cent., though the final closing showed an unsteady tone. Undoubtedly the effect of the fall in New-York and Erie was chiefly relied upon by the speculators for a further decline on the general list, and this weak point in the market was variously attributed to the statement just published of the December quarter, the assumed probability that the March quarter will be less favorable, the rumor that the 5,000 shares reserved capital of the Company have been or are to be thrown on the market, and the suspicion referred to in our last that some of the executive officers are the heaviest Bears in the Stock. Amidst all these causes of decline and suspicions of a lower point of depression we have not heard it once pretended that the Spring and Summer traffic of the line, nor that the difficulties growing out of the October strike have been reconciled, is to be less valuable than last season, when from April to Sept. 30 it yielded 9 ⅌ cent. net to the capital. The closing sales of Erie were at 52⅝ cash, 53 buyer 30 and 53½ buyer 60 days. The lowest point of the morning was 52 ⅌ cent. Reading closed 79¾; New-York Central, 89½; Toledo, 72¾; Michigan Southern, 73 ⅌ cent. Illinois Central Bonds were firm at 101¾; Virginia State Stock, ½ ⅌ cent. firmer than on Saturday; Missouris ¼ ⅌ cent. off. The Money Market was more active than on Saturday, for demand loans, but without alteration in Discounts. Foreign Bills for the Persia have not moved sufficiently yet to establish the exact temper of the market. The leading holders of Sterling demand 108½ ⅌ cent.

The following card from two of the Directors of the Milwaukee and Mississippi Road appears in the Express of this evening in reply to one of the numerous, and, we must say, unfair attacks made on this property, of late, in Wall-street.

OFFICE OF THE MILWAUKEE AND MISSISSIPPI RAILROAD CO., No. 37 Exchange place,
NEW-YORK, Monday, March 16, 1857.

To the Editors of the N. Y. Express:

We notice in your paper of Saturday last, under its Commercial head, the following statement in reference to the Milwaukee and Mississippi Railroad Company: "A new issue of stock will probably be made by this Company as being the most economical source of ready money." And you also add, substantially, though not in terms that the amount to be issued is "two millions." As members of the Board of Direction in that Company, and fully acquainted with its action and line of policy, we beg to assure you that the statement has not the slightest foundation in truth.

There are other statements in the article in question equally untrue; but as they cannot materially affect the standing of the Company, we have no desire to trouble you with a refutation of them.

As public journalists, we doubt not, you are anxious to publish facts only, and in giving publicity to the statements above referred to, we presume you have not been influenced by a disposition to injure the Company, but on the contrary have been misled by information from disaffected parties, in whose statements you had confidence, but who, hereafter, most certainly, cannot, with propriety, lay claim to either your confidence or consideration. Very respectfully, your obedient servants,

JOHN CATLIN,
A. FINCH, Jr.

The Sub-Treasury received to-day $292,797; paid $297,900, and held at the close $15,587,166.

The Commercial of this afternoon thus informs a default in the Long Island Bank:

"A default was made public this morning, of an officer of the Long Island Bank, of Brooklyn. Some time since suspicions had been awakened relative to the first teller, who was believed to be spending more money than was warranted by his income. About two weeks before the regular examination previous to January, by the Bank, occurred on the 1st February, the President and one of the directors, instituted an examination previous to bank hours, and in the absence of the teller, and found his accounts entirely correct, and as he had had an intimation that this investigation was to be made, the inference was that the suspicions entertained were unfounded.

On Thursday night last, however, it was ascertained that he was actually a defaulter, he was discharged, and another appointment was made in his place. As far as the examination has gone, a defalcation of about seven thousand dollars has been discovered, but it is understood that the party implicated stands guilty to an amount of thirteen thousand five hundred dollars. The officers of the Bank do not think that the amount will exceed fifteen thousand dollars, the loss of which will fall upon the securities of the party, who are abundantly able to protect the Bank.

The party who has thus yielded to temptation is most respectably connected in Brooklyn. He has been twenty-nine years connected with the Bank, fifteen years of which he has acted as one of its tellers.

Gold and Money Affairs in California.

From the San Francisco Shipping List.

There has been a manifest improvement in the general character of the business of the city since our last issue, and the fortnight has been, on the whole, a more active one than we have had to register for several months past; but, after all, the aggregate of the business done has been by no means large, and we much fear that a great deal of the activity mentioned has been premature in its character, and will be productive of no good result. The improvement appears to have been based more on hopes of what may be evolved in the future than on the actual state of the country trade; and although the anticipations may be well based and the movements sustained, it must yet be borne in mind that they are all to a certain extent problematical, and that a month hence matters may stand in even a worse position than they did a fortnight ago.

The principal advances to be noticed are in Flour, Grain, Provisions, Sugars and Coffee, while many other staple articles continue in an exceedingly depressed state. The market for Rice is firm, and the advance in this, as in other descriptions of China and East Indian goods, appears to be legitimate. It will be noticed, however, with most of the other articles that they even now hardly cover the cost of importation, and that the improved prices afford no encouragement for shipments hitherward. In fact, parties on the Atlantic border interested in this market have but small reason to congratulate themselves on the success of their ventures to San Francisco, albeit the market looks better now than it did a month ago.

The weather during the past fortnight has been generally very stormy in its character, and the miners have not in the main been enabled to prosecute their work. At the same time the heavy rains which have fallen will largely increase the product of gold during the coming month, and with a few weeks comparatively dry weather we may expect a most favorable return for all kinds of labor throughout the State. The roads are at present in very bad order, and transportation off the rivers is difficult and expensive, but with a few days of bright sunshine this evil will be remedied to a considerable degree, and the character of the country demand for the spring be pretty clearly indicated.

From the Sun Francisco Bulletin.

In some respects there has been more animation in business during a portion of the last fortnight than we have had occasion to note since the setting in of the Winter season, and, for a few staple articles, an improvement can be noted in prices. In Flour, Dried Apples, Refined Sugars, Beans, Hams and Cask Claret there have been operations more or less speculative in their character, but which were manifestly so well founded as to result in enhanced values being established. On the other hand, however, the greater bulk of staple goods remain exceedingly depressed. Boots and Shoes, Dry Goods, Clothing, Beans, Coals, Candles, Cigars, nearly all kinds of Fruits and Preserves, Hops, Metals, Nails, Malt Liquors, Spirits, Salt, Spirits Turpentine, etc., are without appreciable change, and, without an exception, are in over supply.

The receipts of Gold Dust from the country during the past fortnight have been moderate, owing, doubtless, in a great measure, to the fact that the heavy rains which have fallen have made the roads very bad. There can be no question, but that the rate of yield now throughout the mines is very great, and satisfactory evidence will ere long be afforded of it by the deposits at the Mint.

The supply of Bars is about equal to the demand, and 900 fine and upwards are selling at about ½ discount.

There is no change to be remarked in the supply of Money, or the rates of Interest.

The exports of Treasure from this port from Jan. 1 to date have been $4,948,008. The imports during the same period were $667,911, a considerable proportion of which was Silver from Mexico for transhipment to China.

The following is a statement of the business done at the San Francisco Custom-House from Jan. 1 to Feb. 15:

	Value.
Merchandise paid duty direct	$491,673
Merchandise withdrawn from warehouse for consumption	180,870
Merchandise warehoused	301,629
Merchandise withdrawn from warehouse for export	32,005
Cash received for duties and deposit	207,053

From the above statement it appears that the net importation of Foreign Merchandise from Jan. 1 to Feb. 15, was of the value of $659,487, and the value of goods put upon the market during the same period was $652,942.

The Auditor has rendered the following statement of the Finances of the City and County of San Francisco from July 1, 1856, to Jan. 31, 1857:

Receipts into the Treasury from all sources	$459,872 93
Disbursements for the support of the City and County Government	215,281 76
City and County Claims, liquidated	411,874 10
Cash in the Treasury, Jan. 31	32,130 54

From July 1, 1856, to Jan. 31, 1857, there were demands against the Treasury audited to the amount of $215,281 76, of which there remained outstanding on the last mentioned date $91,359 96. The approximate estimate of Revenue to accrue from the 31st January to the 30th June next is $58,778, and the probable expenditures for the same period, amount to $60,584 53. The following is a
